Teachers authorize school strike

By MICHAEL GARDNER

A POSSIBLE teacher strike looms in the Carmel Unified School District just three weeks before final exams and graduation day.

In a special May 21 before-school meeting, about 75 teachers granted the executive board of the Association of Carmel Teachers authority to call a strike if further mediation attempts fail.

Teachers, who have rejected a 3 percent salary increase offer because they want a guarantee of salary hikes built into the 1985-86 budget, have worked since September without a 1984-85 contract.

Teachers authorized the executive committee of Imogene Speiser, Jim Agan, Jack Ellena, Dan Stevenson and Marilyn Bjonerud "to take whatever action is necessary to bring our contract to fulfillment."

Asked about possible actions, Speiser told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook they could include "whatever is necessary...including work stoppage."

Teachers also granted their ACT executive committee the right to call for a strike when school starts in September if a separate 1985-86 contract is not settled.

Speiser said it is "highly unlikely" teachers would strike during finals week and graduation.

"Teachers wouldn't choose that time. It's just not in their makeup," she said. "We're very concerned about bargaining in good faith...We're willing to go back to the table anytime.

"We have no interest in disrupting the educational process. (But) It's up to the executive board to make that decision," she added.

However unlikely, a strike in the waning days of the school year could create chaos in the district because state law requires schools to be open 175 days.

Students probably would have to be called back to school after the strike is settled. Attendance would be mandatory.

And if a strike is called during finals week, the tests would have to be made up later. Diplomas also would be withheld and seniors planning to go away to school may be affected. Graduation is June 13.

The strike threat was so real earlier this week that some principals devised contingency plans in case teachers authorized a work stoppage Tuesday morning.

But teachers decided not to call for an immediate strike until after a mediation fact-finding team concludes a report that may break the contract deadlock.

The fact-finding panel — made up of teacher and school board representatives and a mediator from the state Public Employees Relations Board — is to meet Friday May 24 to work on the stalled contract talks.

"No decision will be made until after the mediation. We don't want to do anything to endanger that process," Speiser said.

Carmel Valley celebrates Spring Festival

THE CARMEL Valley Trail and Saddle Club was the site of a sunny day of fun, food and games during the first-ever Carmel Valley Spring Festival Sunday, May 19. The festival featured numerous fund raising game and food booths sponsored by area non-profit groups such as the Little League, Boy Scouts and Family Resource Center. Above, Tom Harris of Oliver's Carriage Tours took some happy youngsters and the young at heart on an old-fashioned hay ride against the backdrop of the Carmel Valley hills. Below, Sage Scherman, hotdog in hand, took aim with the rubber band gun at the Kiwanis' "Da Gun Dat Won Da West" booth. For more pictures, please see page 10. (Michael Gardner photos.)

'Music lovers? Hogwash!'

Dear Editor:

If good music is the point, we have an outstanding conductor and a wonderful orchestra hungry to play. If power is the point we don't deserve a symphony.

Oleg Kovalenko scored more points from the two year search committee and the board itself than Clark Suttle. If logic and sanity prevail he should now automatically be moved to first position.

On the other hand, if this extensive and expensive conductor search was a sham, the taxpayers who support this non-profit, tax-exempt organization are being shafted, and this board has bargained in bad faith.

The directors may work for nothing but the orchestra works for next to nothing (an average of less than $1 per hour) and most of them, unlike their more priviledged adversaries, must practice several hours a day and take other jobs in order to live.

Altruistic, maybe. But music lovers? Hogwash! These directors will go down in the history of this community as the people who would rather save face than Save our Symphony.

The residents of this county, even those who do not attend the concerts, are proud of their symphony, just as they are proud of their parks and their beaches and their libraries. How said and ironic that the very people most dedicated to bringing good music to the community are taking it away.

This is definitely not a Guild position. In fact, I must admit that I am quite alone out here.

Lost faith in board

Dear Editor:

After being in the Mid-Valley Fire Department for seven and one-half years, I am deeply hurt and shocked by the decision of the board to ask for Dan Guice's resignation. I feel it was done behind the volunteers' backs, and with the input of a small minority of the department.

It is amazing to me that almost all of the volunteers I talked to found out by reading about the decision in the paper or by word of mouth. In my opinion, because of this and for several other reasons, I feel that the board did not act in a professional manner or with the welfare of the department in mind.

I am extremely proud to be a part of such an outstanding fire department. We have one of the best reputations on the peninsula. We are extremely well trained, professional, safety conscious, and have a very caring attitude. Our cooperation with other departments, the highway patrol, and the sheriff's department is exemplary.

Our firefighting and emergency medical care skills and cohesiveness as a group are the direct result of several factors. One is the pride and dedication exhibited by the group. Another very important factor is the skill, expertise, caring, and concern of the entire paid staff and volunteer officers.

The training program keeps us up-to-date in all necessary skills. The emphasis on safety is always paramount. Personally, I always feel safe regardless of how dangerous the situation is on an emergency scene, because the officers put our personal safety first.

If, as the board has publicly stated, the reason was low morale, they have made a big mistake. For even though we are still serving the public to the best of our ability, I personally know of volunteers who now do have a morale problem, including myself, due to the board action and its method of implementation. I personally have no faith in the board at this time. Even though a majority of the department supports Dan Guice, the board position is that they know best and that we should trust them. Bull cookies.

As a result of this incident, I would like to see: 1) the resignation of the board, 2) the reinstatement of Dan Guice, and 3) the board elected rather than politically appointed in the future.

'Tourist trap capital'

Dear Editor:

Until I moved here two years ago, I used to think Carmel was a charming, wonderful place to live. Now, I sadly have changed my mind.

Any resident who is in touch with reality can't possibly think of Carmel as an ideal place to live.

Carmel is a tourist trap, cut and dried. Any attempt to make it a community is futile.

I have been to one city council meeting and I found it absurd. The council denied the Little family the opportunity to rebuild their motel, with an underground parking lot, yet now we find the city wants to buy the property at The Grunion Run, for a parking lot and restrooms. My God, what hypocrisy!

Goodbye old Carmel, and welcome nouveau riche land owners and tourist trap capital of the world.

About open burning

Dear Editor:

A recent Pine Cone/Outlook letter to the editor was directed at Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman and, in my view, incorrectly characterized the supervisor's action during the Feb. 20 Monterey Bay Unified Air Pollution Control District board meeting as "against" controlling open burning.

It is somewhat ironic that the author of the letter to the editor was, apparently, not in attendance at the hearing (having neither signed the attendance log nor provided testimony to the board). However, I am concerned that the board action may have been misconstrued by the public not in attendance during the public hearing.

Backyard burning within the Monterey Peninsula/Carmel Valley smoke-sensitive area has been "permitted" by requiring permits, has been "regulated" in the past only through the use of burn/no-burn days, and always has been allowed on one- or two-family dwelling premises during many winter-spring seasons through Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Benito counties.

It became clear with the increasing complaints and the many varied approaches by individual fire protection agencies that a new perspective was needed in addressing open burning pollution problems. Supervisor Strasser Kauffman was instrumental in the board action which set the foundation for pragmatically controlling open burning.

Under the new regulation the fire protection agencies which have banned open burning (Monterey, Pacific Grove and Pebble Beach) may continue to be more stringent than others, and those agencies allowing open outdoor burning will continue issuing burn-season permits. However, under the new rule, the permits are valid upon receipt of a daily authorization number. That is, when wishing to burn, the permittee must call the respective local fire district to obtain an authorization number — only 25 per day will be issued in each fire district. The rule will take effect Dec. 1.

Open burning, wood burning stoves, fireplaces and vehicular emissions, in addition to industry source emissions, all add to the overall pollution and occasional visibility reduction. The state and federal governments have both established health-based ambient air quality standards, above which adverse health effects are likely to occur to the more sensitive population groups. From data obtained to date (the district monitors the air quality within the Carmel Valley), no violations of any health-based standards occurred during the previous backyard burn season, Dec. 1 through May 31.

Nevertheless, some Carmel Valley residents complained that smoke from open-burning activities poses a health threat. The board responded by holding numerous public meetings, leading to the action limiting increases in burning by placing a cap of 25 burns per day per fire district, thus laying the framework to address the issue in the future after proper data are collected and evaluated.

Supervisor Strasser Kauffman demonstrated a keen interest in working hard to develop cooperation among members of the public and representatives from local fire protection agencies and the air pollution district in order to develop the new pragmatic and enforceable regulation which, hopefully, will lead to improvement and preservation of our air quality resource, the foundation of the quality of life we enjoy locally.

Problem is storage

Dear Editor:

There is a common misperception that this is a water-short area. It is not. During the last 25 years the average flow of the Carmel River past the present San Clemente dam has been more than 50,000 acre feet per year.

To supplement our present usage through the Cal Am system, we will need less than 7,000 acre feet additional per year to take care of our projected needs well into the 21st century.

Thus we see that the Monterey Peninsula area does not have a water supply shortage. It has a storage capacity shortage.

The river usually dries up in the summer. Also its annual runoff is highly irregular. For example: in the 1977 water year the flow was only 36 acre feet; in 1978 it was 149,000; in 1981 it was 37,000; and in 1983 it was 320,000.

A new dam will not only provide a constant water supply for people, it will also greatly improve the Carmel River environment for fish, birds and plants.

There is plenty of water out there. We just don't have a big enough vessel to store it in. Of course the vessel will cost a lot of money.

Education for virtue

Dear Editor:

Education is the acquisition of wisdom, and through wisdom, virtue.

Consequently education is self-justified. It needs no secondary justification. It actually shrivels at the touch of secondary justification. Therefore it is a heresy that education must be useful, which would be to say that providing money for schools and teaching in order that our factories and enterprises may be profitable, productive, and (accursed word) competitive, is as sinful as to claim that we pay for doctors and hospitals in order to have stronger and healthier soldiers, busier bureaucrats, and more productive workers.

With this non-material view of education in mind, the recent tergiversations of the Carmel Unified School District and of its board of trustees might be revealed for what they are — inimical to true learning and true teaching which should be free of all collateral motives.

The idea that the spending of money on education — $55,000 for the supererogatory position of a school superintendent — should take up more time, more effort, more conscience, and more money than the essence of education, the subjects taught and the teacher teaching, is barbarous.

That a superintendent of administration should be paid more than a teacher of the humanities or arts or sciences is barbarous. In the end, a state or town that cannot distinguish the priorities of true learning and true teaching is an uncivilized state and will bring down upon itself the penalties which attend the inhumanity of greedy expectation: that money will buy education.

To repeat, it is a heresy that education must be useful. Spending money on education is a charity — full stop. It is not to finance administrative careers but to promote the acquisition of wisdom, so that the students, in turn, can better acquire virtue — an elliptical attribute in all of the recent Carmel Unified School District's deliberations.

Pee wee golf course?

Dear Editor:

Instead of emerging as an example of Carmel's natural and artistic heritage, at the Piccadilly Park I see half of the formerly level lot obscured by a mound, built up so a path can wind up, then down, to an unnecessary bridge leading to benches (bolted down) and further on, lower, to a pool — none of which an infirm person can come to or return from.

At the side, I see two columns rising to nowhere and supporting a contrived pile of slats. Then, at the entrance, there is an archway proportioned for a Shinto temple.

Of course, I see no restrooms which many citizens and merchants pleaded for and which thousands of tourists will look for.

Even when fully planted and grown, it will always look like a survivor of the pee wee golf course craze, rather than a lovely and useful replacement for the simple, unique nursery we all admired.

PLEASE STOP!

Salvage a little of what has been done and re-plan the area. Consult with the Carmel Garden Club, the Carmel Arboretum Society to achieve something which represents the excellent taste of Carmel residents on such matters.

Otherwise, our money will be spent to create a forever controversial conversation piece — nothing more.

If rainfall is slight

Water rationing possible in 1986

By ROBERT MISKIMON

WATER rationing may become a fact of life by the summer of 1986, if rainfall during the coming winter is much below normal.

Directors of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District came to grips with that projection — based on season rainfall — when they decided last week to increase water production from Seaside and Carmel Valley wells.

Because of lower-than-average rainfall last winter, water shortages could become acute by this time next year, if rainfall this winter matches precipitation in the 1977 drought year, directors learned at their May 13 meeting in Seaside City Hall.

During the drought year of 1976, rainfall on the Monterey Peninsula only measured 9.88 inches, about half of the 30-year average of 19.55 inches. In 1977, total rainfall was only 10.48 inches.

To compensate for the light rainfall of last winter, the board of directors adopted a management policy for the California-American Water Co. production system which calls for increased pumping from the Seaside aquifer.

Increased reliance on the Seaside water table also is occasioned by constraints on pumping from four lower Carmel Valley wells because of the lack of an efficient irrigation system in the Valley, according to a staff report.

Rainfall, as measured at the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey as of May 1, was 16.14 inches for the 1984-85 water year — 1.45 inches less than the 18.59 inches of precipitation which is average on that date.

On the same date, storage at Los Padres Dam on the Carmel River was reported as full at 2,000 acre feet, with approximately 800 acre feet of water in the reservoir behind San Clemente Dam, according to Cal-Am figures. (An acre foot is 325,851 gallons.)

The Carmel Valley ground water table is estimated to hold 35,000 ac. ft. of usable storage, while usable storage in the Seaside aquifer is estimated at 70,000 ac. ft.

"The nominal rated capacity for all facilities indicates that Cal-Am could produce in excess of 28,000 ac. ft. of water in a wet year," according to the staff report. "Cal-Am's projected production during 1985-86 is estimated at 17,000 ac. ft., slightly lower than the 17,400 ac. ft. recorded during 1983-84 and slightly higher than the estimated 1984-85 production of 16,800 ac. ft."

With no additional rain during May and June, Cal-Am could still meet total Monterey Peninsula water demand through January of 1986. However, "if rainfall during the winter of 1986 matched that recorded during 1977, Cal-Am would not be able to meet peak demands during the summer of 1986 and some form of demand management would be necessary," the staff report states.

•

MANAGEMENT policy adopted by the water district board sets a target of 35 percent of system production from the Carmel Valley filter plant and a long-term average yield from the Seaside basin of 3,400 ac. ft.

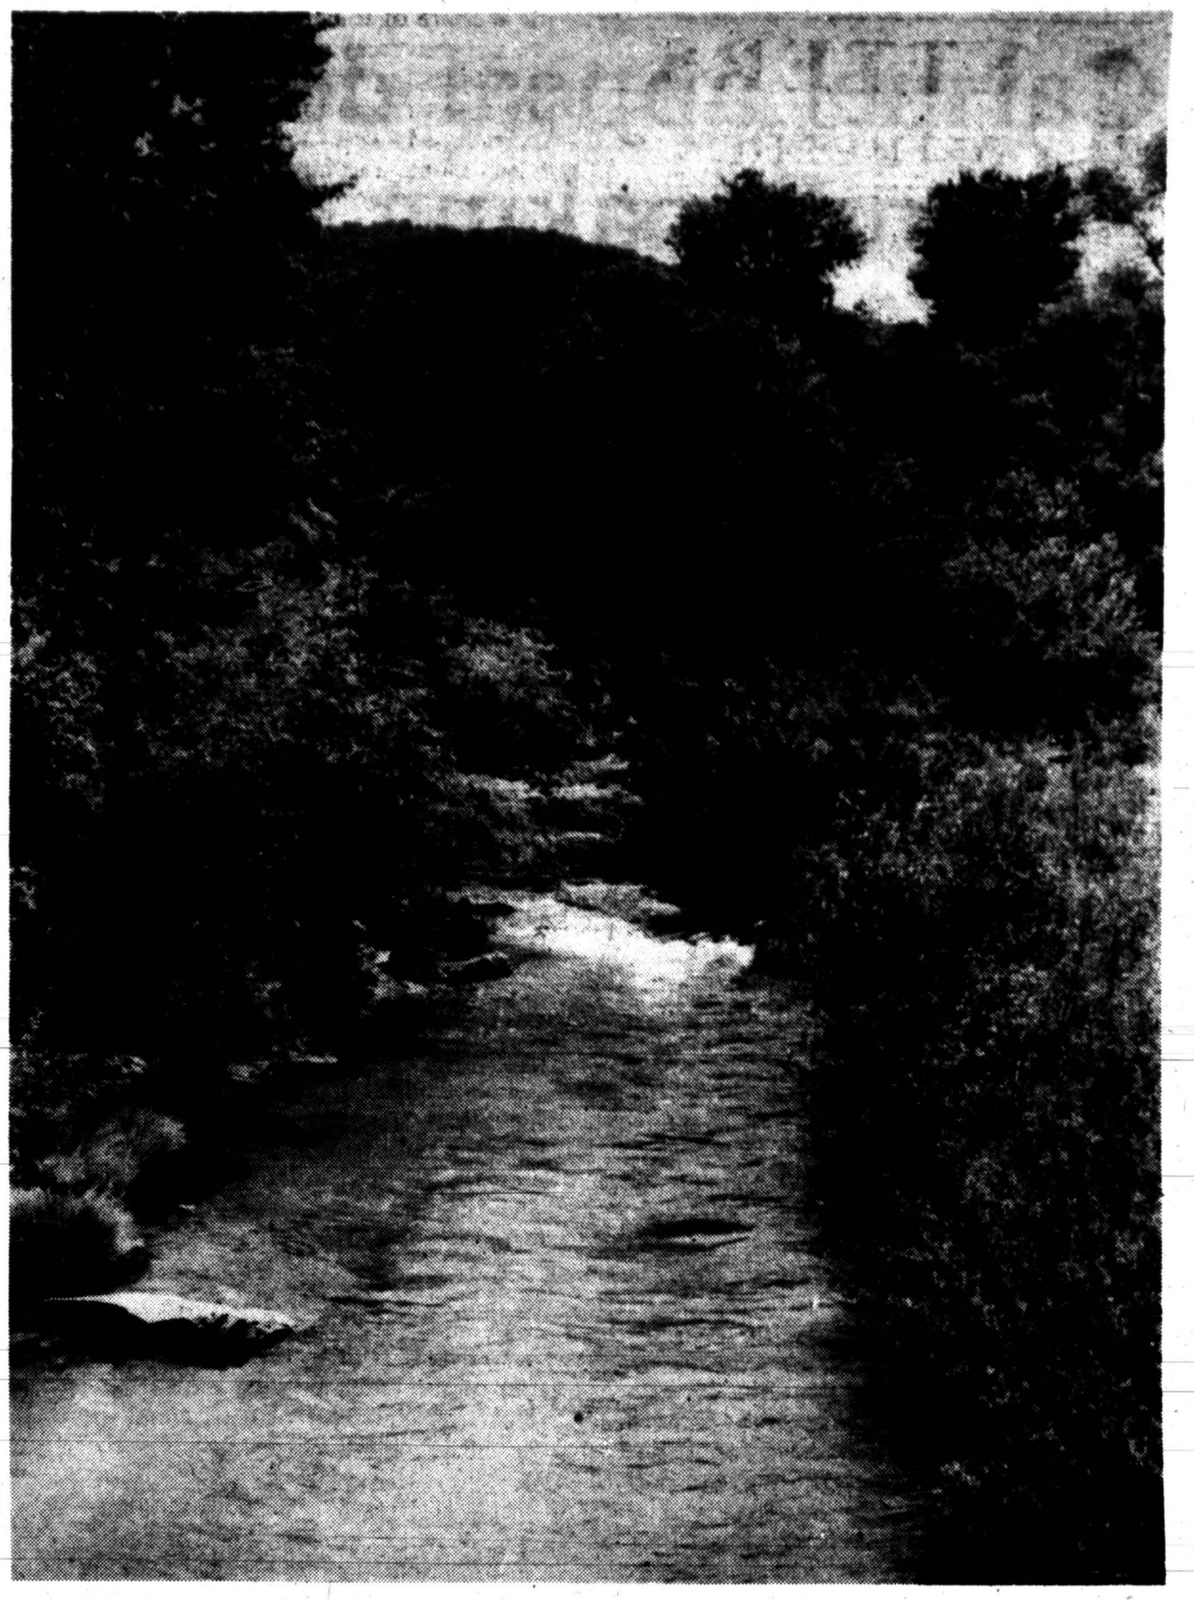
Directors followed a staff recommendation that the Seaside aquifer be pumped at maximum capacity during peak demand months of April through October to relieve the Carmel Valley wells. And the Carmel Valley filter plant will produce no more than 35 percent of the system total.

Under the management policy adopted by the board, Cal-Am is required to maintain at least 3 cubic feet per second (cfs) of flow in the Carmel River below San Clemente Dam "at all times."

Thus, the Carmel filter plant will produce 5,950 ac. ft. during the 1985-86 water year; Seaside aquifer 4,000 ac. ft.; Carmel Valley aquifer 7,050 ac. ft., of which 6,800 ac. ft. will come from lower Carmel Valley wells and 250 ac. ft. from upper Carmel Valley wells.

"Concerning long-term drought vulnerability, demand is expected to increase to approximately 18,600 ac. ft. by the year 1995 in the Cal-Am service territory," according to the state report.

"With a normal year consumption of 18,600 ac. ft., the district computer simulation predicts that the maximum shortfall that would occur with a repeat of the 1977 year runoff record would be 4,300 ac. ft., or 23 percent."



RAINFALL has been below normal this year, and unless precipitation increases next winter, water rationing is a real possibility for the summer of 1986, according to the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District. The upper Carmel River (above) flows into the Los Padres Dam, which now stores 2,000 ac. ft. of water, and the San Clemente Dam, which stores 800 ac. ft.

Carmel High gets manikins

WITH THE assistance of the Crosby Fund and the support of the Carmel Fire Department and Carmel Red Cross, Carmel High School was able to purchase two new recording "Resusci-Annie" and "Resusci-Baby" manikins for use in cardio-pulmonary resuscitation classes. CPR is now a requirement for high school graduation. Unloading the manikins were (from left) students Amy Fuller and Juliet Peck. Instructor Howard Sanborn (rear) watched, as did students Mauricio Keene, Chris Nolte and Gilbert Tostevin.

School board sharpens budget-cutting knife

By MICHAEL GARDNER

AS STUDY sessions on the draft 1985-86 budget begin, the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education finds itself confronted with the all-too-familiar dilemma of too many expenses and not enough revenue.

Interim Supt. Rich Hawkins will present a comprehensive report on his nearly $7.3 million budget proposal when trustees meet in a special study session at 7 p.m. Thursday, May 23 in the Carmel Middle School library, south side of Carmel Valley Road about one mile east of Highway 1.

None of that $7.3 million in revenues is generated from the proposed $45 per parcel tax to go before voters on the July 23 ballot. The tax is expected to net at least $500,000.

But even if the necessary two-thirds vote is cast, none of that parcel tax money is expected to be available until property tax payments are distributed by the county sometime around Jan. 1, 1986.

'It just shows that we do not have choices — just dilemmas,' said board President Susan Bromfield.

Trustees are adamant that any potential parcel tax funds not be spent on ongoing costs such as staff salaries, which amount to approximately 85 percent of the total budget.

Trustees reason that the tax will be in effect for only four years and the cost of salary increases will still be encumbered by the district long after the parcel tax income dries up.

The tax, therefore, will be used for many one-time expenditures or for easily cancellable programs rather than for ongoing staff pay hikes or state-mandated curricula.

The parcel tax resolution specifically spells out how the funds are to be spent.

"The revenue from the special tax shall be expended solely for the following: a) reducing class size at selected grade levels and in certain designated secondary subject areas, b) providing additional educational program offerings for students, c) restoring needed support staff positions, d) providing adequate staff development for classified and certificated employees, e) providing additional library and classroom instructional materials and up-to-date equipment for the schools in the district, f) addition of classrooms, g) maintenance of facilities and grounds, and h) replacement of buses."

Making the limited 1985-86 budget dollars stretch as far as possible will not be an easy task for trustees, who already are inundated with requests for expenditures such as staff pay raises, a full-time counselor at the middle school and a complete music program at the high school.

•

BUT TRUSTEES no doubt will have to focus attention more on cuts rather than additions to the educational programs.

The proposed 1985-86 budget is technically balanced only because it includes a false "beginning balance" of $359,613.

At least half of that $359,613 will disappear for pay raises when staff contracts are settled.

Teachers still have not agreed to the latest district offer of about 3 percent. A 3 percent across-the-board staff pay hike will cost about $165,000.

The "ending balance" or reserve in the 1985-86 budget is estimated at $78,443 — and that takes into account the $359,613 beginning balance, most of which really won't be available to spend in the new fiscal year.

And there is no line item in the budget allocated for staff pay hikes in 1985-86.

The $78,443 would finance an approximately 1.5 percent across-the-board salary increase.

Carmel appeal delays groundbreaking for Spanish Bay project

PEBBLE BEACH Co. has been dealt another delay in its efforts to start construction of the Spanish Bay resort project.

This time the delay is over a city of Carmel appeal of the May 8 Monterey County Planning Commission decision to issue a use permit for a conveyor belt that will haul 530,000 cubic yards of sand to the site of the 270-room hotel, 80 condominium and golf course project.

The appeal will take at least three more weeks to be reviewed by the Monterey County Counsel's Office before the issue is placed on the agenda of the board of supervisors.

Supervisors are not expected to hear the appeal until June — more than six months after the originally projected December groundbreaking for the resort on the north side of Del Monte Forest near the Pacific Grove city limits.

'We are interested in the process. These people have shown they just want to subvert the process. They don't believe they have to play by the rules,' Mayor Charlotte Townsend said.

Delays in the project have been generated by postponement of Coastal Commission action on the resort until March and by court proceedings.

The Carmel City Council filed the appeal based on charges that the county did not grant adequate time for local agencies and citizens to review the proposed addendum to the environmental impact report for the conveyor belt sand hauling scheme.

The city received the addendum report less than 48 hours before the commission meeting.

Planning commissioners — despite many objections from local residents and the city of Carmel — determined that the Pebble Beach Co. did not have to prepare a "supplementary" EIR for the conveyor belt.

A supplementary report would have to be distributed to local agencies throughout the county for a 30-day review period, a delay Pebble Beach Co. officials did not relish.

Steve Eimer, real estate development manager for the company, called the appeal "harassment" and questioned why the city is so concerned over a project that will have minimal environmental impacts limited to the forest.

"Certainly the appeal will hurt us because it's just another delay. I'm not going to order a conveyor belt if in fact we have to use trucks."

The Coastal Commission use permit for the resort specifies that the company must haul the sand from Sawmill Gulch via an approximately two-mile-long conveyor belt. The original truck hauling scheme was rejected because of noise and safety problems.

•

EIMER DOES not rule out a reapplication of the truck hauling plan if supervisors reject the conveyor belt proposal or require the more costly and time-consuming supplemental EIR.

"Going back to the trucks would be an option we would consider," Eimer said.

The company would have to resubmit plans to the Coastal Commission if it wants to revert to the truck hauling scheme.

Carmel Mayor Charlotte Townsend summed up council opinion when she told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook:

"We are interested in the process. These people have shown they just want to subvert the process. They don't believe they have to play by the rules."

THIS "BORROW PIT" in Del Monte Forest will remain unscathed for the time being while the City of Carmel pushes its appeal of a Monterey County Planning Commission decision not to require a supplementary environmental impact report for a sand haul conveyor belt from the pit to the Spanish Bay resort construction site. (Michael Gardner photo.)

City Planning Director Diane White has issued a two-page letter that outlines why the city should appeal the planning commission decision.

White explained that the city did not receive the materials to be addressed by the planning commission until two days before the May 8 meeting.

"One may ask the county why bother to send the materials out if they do not give sufficient time for review. This is an example of how little the county understands the reasons or has respect for public participation."

White's letter continued to be critical of the county: "The planning commission adopted an EIR addendum, i.e. no public review required, but failed to make any findings substantiating that determination, nor is there any evidence that the county considered the final EIR for Spanish Bay as required by the state law.

"Again, reasoned public comment was significantly thwarted in the decision to prepare (an addendum) by the lack of sufficient public review time."

White believes there are significant enough concerns to warrant a supplementary environmental impact report to be prepared by the company.

"The noise analysis finding no significant noise impacts was based on monitoring a conveyor system in Sacramento.

"There is no detailed comparison of this system with the system proposed for Spanish Bay. Nor is there any documentation that the redwood slat fence and terrain would further mitigate noise as stated in the report.

"There is no analysis of the effect of the system on wildlife migration.

"There is no basis for the claim by the applicant that the conveyor would result in no fugitive dust. But if this claim is found to be in error, substantial greater water use would be required and this in turn could affect surface drainage and result in the over-rotting of trees.

"There is no evidence that the county staff conducted an independent evaluation of the EIR addendum. The report was prepared by a consultant to the county staff.

"By the staff's own admission, the report was received just nine days before the hearing and apparently provided to the planning commission with no corrections.

"Under the California Environmental Quality Act the lead agency is responsible for the adequacy and objectivity of reports.

"There is no evidence that the county carried out this responsibility," White's report concluded.

Correction

The Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook incorrectly reported last week that a moratorium has been imposed on new commercial water connections in Carmel

No official moratorium has been enacted, although the city has adopted a policy not to allow new businesses to open if they will consume more water than a previously existing business at the same location.

Board to hear challenge to P.B. wastewater plant

A CHALLENGE to the proposed wastewater reclamation plant in Pebble Beach is to be heard by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors Tuesday, May 28.

Supervisors have scheduled the hearing for 10:30 a.m. in the county courthouse in Salinas.

Before supervisors is an appeal filed by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District that challenges a county planning commission decision to grant a use permit for the wastewater treatment at Sawmill Gulch.

The Pebble Beach Community Services District plans to build a wastewater treatment plant that will reclaim 600,000 gallons of water per day from sewage to irrigate golf courses throughout Del Monte Forest.

The water district maintains the community services district did not prepare a thorough environmental impact report.

In addition, the water district believes that it is the permitting agency for the project and should be accountable for issuance of the use permit.

The Pebble Beach Community Services District has taken the position that the plant is a waste disposal project and thus is not subject to water district controls.

In a related matter, the community services district May 20 unanimously decided not to declare Monterey County zoning ordinances "inapplicable" as the rules relate to the Sawmill Gulch site.

The proposed declaration of zoning ordinances as inapplicable was a legal maneuver to speed the permit process for the wastewater treatment plant.

By declaring county zoning laws inapplicable to the project, the district could have sidestepped the appeal before supervisors and immediately applied to the Coastal Commission for the project use permit.

However, the Pebble Beach Community Services District decided not to take the action.

"They decided to let it ride at this point on the basis that the issue is not as pressing as originally thought," PBCSD manager Stan Kawa told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook after the meeting.

Kawa said earlier directors thought it might be necessary to speed the use permit to the Coastal Commission.

However the project still faces a delay because a city of Carmel, water district and Carmel Sanitary District lawsuit remains before the courts.

The suit claims that the project environment impact report is not adequate and that the community services district did not thoroughly investigate other alternatives to the wastewater treatment plant.

"We thought we'd move it to the Coastal Commission but it's not settled with the water management district lawsuit. The urgency at this point isn't there," Kawa said.

Sanford, Grady seek school posts

WILLIAM SANFORD of Carmel is running an election campaign he hopes to lose.

Sanford, a teacher and husband of former Trustee Barbara Sanford, has filed as a candidate for Carmel Unified School District Board of Education in the upcoming recall election.

Sanford and political newcomer Tim Grady bring the total to five candidates who will seek election when voters go to the polls July 23 to determine whether Trustees Susan Bromfield, Robert Fenton and Jim Yates should be removed from office.

'I'm running because I'm incensed, mad (and) indignant about the obscene innuendo in the retirement announcement,' Sanford said.

On the ballot, voters first will be asked whether each individual trustee should be recalled. Then voters can cast their ballots for a replacement candidate for each of the three positions.

Under recall guidelines, candidates must run against a specific incumbent.

The other three candidates who filed earlier are:

• Pat Herro of Carmel Valley is a 40-year-old occupational therapist who seeks Fenton's position.

• Hilton Bialek of the Hatton Fields area is a 58-year-old retired educational training research consultant and former Carmel school board member. He seeks to replace Bromfield.

• Claudia Daniels of Carmel Highlands is a 39-year-old marriage and family life counselor who will challenge Jim Yates.

Sanford, who has lost twice in his bids for election to the school board, will oppose Bromfield on the ballot.

However, he supports Bromfield, Fenton and Yates and what he terms their efforts to provide long-range planning in the district and stop "cliques" from maintaining control.

"I should have to run because these people are right. I think the three people should not be recalled. The recall (supporters) want to be in charge representing their small cliquish point of view."

Sanford supports the decision by Yates, Fenton and Bromfield to accept former Supt.

School board sharpens budget-cutting knife

Thus, in reality, the district faces a potential huge deficit even though the initial 1985-86 budget is balanced on paper.

And any lottery money cannot be counted on until at least spring of 1986, according to the state Department of Education.

The lingering question before trustees is how to balance the need for programs and the demands for suitable staff pay increases.

Any decision must take into account a cycle related to the program cuts or staff raise dilemma.

If programs are cut, then the district may lose enrollment to the private schools. State income is based on enrollment. For each full-time student in attendance, the district receives $2,374.73.

A likely possibility is that affluent parents — concerned about program cuts needed to finance teacher pay increases — would enroll their children in private schools.

But teacher pay increases are also an integral and important factor, trustees acknowledge.

Without a competitive salary structure, the best teachers will search for work elsewhere. For example, computer education specialist Jay Criddle has resigned to take a higher-paying position in the private sector.

Thus, parents who believe the best teachers are in the private schools probably will enroll their children at Santa Catalina, York, All Saints, Robert Louis Stevenson, Briarcliff or Junipero Serra schools.

•

THE RESULT would be lower enrollment, less revenue and even more program cuts — a vicious circle not unknown in the Carmel district.

"It just shows that we do not have choices — just dilemmas," is how board President Susan Bromfield summarized the situation.

"Where are we going to get the dollars to provide for the educational needs of our students?" she asked. "We must totally rely on the governor's budget."

Bromfield said the 1985-86 budget shortfall serves to highlight the importance of the parcel tax.

Such necessary equipment purchases as microscopes and library books "have not even been dealt with in the budget for the past eight to 10 years," she said.

And trustees soon had better find the capital for some much-needed maintenance projects, Bromfield cautioned.

"Every school, and we're talking about long-range planning, must have a capital replacement program. The schools are going to need new roofs," she said.

"Where's the district going to get that money? It's not an emergency crisis this year, but what about next year?"

Hawkins confirmed that even if the parcel tax passes in July it will be several months before the district receives any new income.

"It is tied to the normal collection of property taxes. I would think we would be getting some by Jan. 1, 1986," Hawkins said.

Hawkins said trustees could include the funds in the budget if the measure is approved, but the money should not be spent until January.

"We could make some plans but we certainly wouldn't spend any of that money," he said.

For example, the district probably will lease two portable classrooms for Carmel River School for a six-month period. When the lease expires, the board would have the option of using parcel tax monies to continue the lease or buy the portable classrooms, Hawkins said.

Carmel seniors can get reduced fare passes

CARMEL SENIOR citizens 65 and older and handicapped residents next week may obtain reduced fare passes for taxi and bus service through two separate programs.

The passes will be issued free from 10 a.m. to 12 noon Wednesday, May 29 at the Carmel Foundation, east side of Lincoln Street between Eighth and Ninth avenues.

The handicapped transit program is available to the developmentally disabled who cannot use Monterey-Salinas Transit buses or walk to the bus stop.

Eligible Carmel residents with handicapped transit cards can call the taxi service and pay only $1 for each one-way trip within the city limits.

The taxi service is subsidized through a $10,000 grant from the city of Carmel.

A separate program is available for senior citizens 65 and older.

The eligible seniors with a courtesy card can ride MST buses between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. for 25 cents per zone. Regular fares of 75 cents per zone are charged during other times.

Seniors may obtain the courtesy card May 29 in Carmel, or on the first Monday of each month at the New Monterey Neighborhood Center, or on the third Thursday of each month at the Seaside Multi-Purpose Center.

More information is available May 29 or by calling the county transit coordinator at 424-0991.

Clarification

A STORY in the May 16 edition of the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook incorrectly stated that Carmel Unified School District teachers have been offered a 5 percent pay raise.

Teachers actually have been offered a 3 percent salary hike, plus another 2.27 percent increase to offset longer hours and more teaching days that went into effect last fall.

Teachers have accepted the 2.27 percent offer, but remain without a contract because of the salary dispute.

The Board of Directors of the Monterey County Symphony Association offers the following statement to the residents of Monterey County.

For nearly two years the Association Board carefully followed a clearly defined process to select a Music Director/Conductor and was pleased to bring to the community eight candidates selected from a field of 175 applicants.

The search process was an arduous undertaking. All the candidates were evaluated on the basis of their technical competence, leadership ability, administrative skills and audience development capabilities. Each candidate, in addition to conducting a set of rehearsals and concerts, underwent personal interviews and had numerous opportunities to interact with the community. The Search Committee sought written responses from the entire orchestra after each candidate worked with the Orchestra. At the end of the search, Board members, Orchestra members and Maestro Haymo Taeuber were given the opportunity to complete a comparative evaluation of all eight candidates.

All parties involved, including the three musicians on the Search Committee, thought the process was fair and open. It was not until the Search Committee recommended a candidate other than Mr. Oleg Kovalenko for the position of Music Director/Conductor that some of the orchestra members criticized the process. This led to the present strike situation. The musicians called a strike before presenting the Association with their grievances, ignoring the current contract provisions with the American Federation of Musicians, Local 616.

The final selection of a Music Director/Conductor is a Board responsibility and its decision cannot be the basis for a strike. In the United States, there is no metropolitan orchestra where the musicians choose their conductor.

Under California law governing non-profit corporations, the Board has the legal responsibility for managing the affairs of the Association and may not abdicate this responsibility to others. Any relinquishment of its managerial responsibilities would be detrimental to the Orchestra's well being and would set a precedent endangering the clearly defined working relationship between the Board and the Orchestra.

Once the Board made its decision to hire Mr. Clark Suttle, it had a Music Director and seven former candidates. Some musicians created a hostile environment by directly calling Mr. Suttle and pressuring him not to take the position. Coupled with the strike and the adverse publicity, Mr. Suttle ultimately withdrew, leaving open the possibility of later working with the Association and the community as Music Director/Conductor. At that point, the search process, as spelled out in the beginning, was derailed. There is, at present, no process, and there are no candidates..

Faced with a situation where a successful symphony season cannot be conducted without the total cooperation of talented musicians and the substantial financial support of the community over and above concert ticket receipts (ticket sales generate only 20% of the operating income), the Board is proposing mediation to seek an agreement.

The members of the Board, who represent a cross section of the community and serve with no compensation other than the satisfaction of working to make symphonic music possible, are ready, in spite of keen disappointment, to continue their commitment to the Orchestra. They value the orchestra members as individuals, and they seek the support of the community as they fulfill the necessary functions and responsibilities of a Symphony Board.

Silver prizes offered in Valley Summer Horse Show

FIFTY-FOUR silver plate prizes await winners in some classes of the 15th annual Carmel Valley Kiwanis Club Summer Horse Show.

"We've got everything from Chippendale trays to heart candy dishes and water goblets," said Orville Rogers, trophy chairman. "These are in addition to the 30-inch Challenge trophy, plus a permanent trophy, which goes to the overall high point winners in each of the two divisions, Western and English.

"There are also two CSHA Hunt Seat medals in the English division and the CSHA Stock Seat medal in the Western, plus six ribbons in each event except the Dollar Derby, which offers a cash award," he added. "In addition, the top five contestants in the $100 Working Hunter Stake and the $100 Western Pleasure Stake will earn prizes of from $5 to $45."

The show is both CSHA and Region 10 approved and usually attracts about 400 entrants, said Dr. Steve Austin, secretary/-manager of the show.

He urged all interested in competing to send their premium sheets for entry to him as soon as possible. More than 400 sheets have been mailed to interested individuals and many more distributed to feed stores, tack shops, riding stables and Western stores.

The show will be Sunday, June 16 at the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club, east end of Garzas Road. Admission to the grounds from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. is free. Food will be available through refreshment booths manned by Carmel Valley Kiwanis volunteers.

Money raised through entry fees, food sales and programs will go to support such Carmel Valley Kiwanis Club youth projects as two college scholarships open to Carmel Valley residents attending Carmel High, the Carmel Valley Boy Scouts and the Carmel Valley Community Center.

Dee Dresser in line for high school post

DEE DRESSER, Carmel Middle School assistant principal, is expected to be appointed to a similar position at Carmel High School when the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education meets Thursday, May 23.

Trustees are to convene at 7 p.m. in the middle school library, south side of Carmel Valley Road about one mile east of Highway 1.

The board originally was to meet only in a budget study session, but decided to cancel the regular May 30 meeting.

The board will resume regular meetings June 3.

Dresser will replace Joe Feldeisen, who is the new high school principal. Feldeisen was appointed earlier this year to replace Marsha Kading-Kelly next fall. Kading-Kelly announced her resignation earlier this spring.

No plans have been finalized to replace the vacated middle assistant principal position.

In other action, the board is to:

- Authorize a call for bids for a 16-passenger school bus. The district has received a state grant, which will pay $14,000 of the estimated $20,000 cost of the bus.
- Approve the summer school program.
- Develop a statement for the July 23 ballot in support of the proposed $45 parcel tax that would raise an estimated $500,000 for the district.
- Adopt a resolution to reorganize and trim a couple of hours from aide time in the special education program for the developmentally and mentally disabled students.

CV Little League asks county for construction permit

CARMEL VALLEY Little League hopes the Monterey County Planning Commission will respond with a big "play ball" Wednesday, May 29.

The little league has applied to the county for a special use permit for construction in the floodplain.

The league wants to construct a new diamond and erect a scoreboard near the existing "Benny's Field" off Paso Hondo Road in Carmel Valley.

Commissioners are to review the request at 9:35 a.m. in the county courthouse in Salinas.

Guardrail work on Carmel Valley Road starts

Work on Carmel Valley Road from Los Arboles to Berwick Drive in Carmel Valley started May 6 and is expected to be completed by July 16, according to county officials. The contract was awarded to Granite Construction Co. April 9, at an estimated cost of $498,600.

The contract consists of constructing paved shoulders, providing traffic channelization and placing an asphalt concrete overlay.

Traffic will be subject to minor delays and will be controlled by flag personnel.

Two more file to run in Carmel recall bid

William Rand's resignation — a move that sparked the recall campaign.

"To me the board is the employer and everyone else is the employee. Sometimes you have to be the employer. That was the case with Rand," Sanford said.

Sanford said the board had asked Rand to establish what was needed to meet certain goals and objectives — an instruction never met, he charged.

A board must hold staff accountable, Sanford believes.

"They started with Rand. Where else are you going to start?" Sanford said.

Sanford chose to run only after he saw an "obscene" announcement for a May 16 party for retiring teachers and staff.

•

THE announcment included the names of those being honored depicted in jigsaw puzzle style with block letters.

"When you start at the top and work your way down it spells out 'screw Fenton,' " Sanford asserted.

"I'm running because I'm incensed, mad (and) indignant about the obscene innuendo in the retirement announcement," he said.

Sanford believes the announcement is just another example of a "moral decay" in the district.

"I'm a dinosaur. These are my moral standards," Sanford said.

Sanford is 59 years old and lives in Carmel with his wife, Barbara, who served on the board up until 1983. They operate the Brass Rubbing Centre downtown. Sanford is on half-time retirement from the Monterey Peninsula Unified School District.

Unlike the other four candidates, Tim Grady is not involved in the Rand controversy.

Instead, he prefers to expouse the views of the newly-formed Environmentalist Party, a political organization on the peninsula that seeks to preserve the environment and halt major developments.

A Carmel resident, Grady is a professional singer. He has worked with the Bach Festival and sings at St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church in Carmel Valley. He also is employed by a Pacific Grove restaurant.

The 26-year-old Grady has lived in the district for six months and has no children. He has never sought elected office before. He seeks Fenton's position.

One of Grady's peers is John Fox, a street person by choice who mounted an unsuccessful campaign to run for mayor of Monterey, but was denied offical candidacy because he didn't have a home.

Another of Grady's friends is Michael Bogatirev, who started the Environmentalist Party, and who has mounted a campaign to recall Pacific Grove Mayor Florus Williams and Councilmen Morris Fisher and James Hughes for their decision not to participate in a lawsuit to block development of the Spanish Bay resort in Pebble Beach.

"I'm really moved at this time in our history to address the very root of the problem of the environment, which is being disrupted here on the peninsula," Grady said.

School is the place to begin to mold the "attitude" toward the environment, he believes.

•

GRADY'S GOAL is to "integrate an awareness of the environment" into the school system.

"The concept of environmentalism is to stress a respect of nature. The person identifies with it and doesn't feel separate from it," he said.

Grady wants to see a farm-like atmosphere on campuses.

"I would like to see organic gardening taught on location to demonstrate the viability of living off the land without harmful pesticides and insecticides practiced by the big commercial growers," Grady said.

"I would like to see horses and animals like sheep and cows and dogs on location and see the kids mingle with the animals so they will know how to care for them."

Grady believes that it is important for the younger generation to understand nature because "I'm talking about the survival of our planet. The world is growing smaller. We have to teach harmony with all life."

Grady thinks this area should "rip up all the concrete" and ban cars.

"I have a distaste for the automobile industry," said Grady, who does not own a car. "The assault on your senses is so violent that I think we should reintroduce other ways to get around. It's sort of like an Amish ideal."

Grady acknowledges that his campaign is definitely a longshot.

"I'm really not asking for people's vote. I would like to win. I'm just simply expounding a very fundamental ideal or point of view. I'm not on any ego trip to win."

Shoemaker hits ball out of the park — again!

By DOROTHY MEHEEN

WELL, he did it again.

"He" is none other than Jon Shoemaker, who now has a total of three homeruns after hitting it out of the park once again last Wednesday when Carmel Valley Disposal met Derek Rayne, defeating them 9-3. Ben Jones was the winning pitcher, and George Zarate doubled for CVD.

The day before, La Playa came up from behind to beat Pine Inn 9-6 in a very close game, with Rick Prieto pitching the win. Doubles were collected for PI by Bryan Langley and Clas Brown and for LP by Chris Prieto, Devin Meheen and Andrew Wilson. Chris Prieto was also LP's lead hitter, going 3-5. Jimmy Rittermal made a very nice catch at second base.

On Saturday, Pine Inn had its first win of the season, defeating Derek Rayne 9-8. Philip Fuerstner was pitcher of record. Doubles for DR were collected by Andy Rotharmel and Derek Bonsper, who also was Derek Rayne lead hitter, going 2-3. Bryan Langley also doubled for PI and was their lead hitter, going 2-4.

Directly afterwards, La Playa upset Carmel Valley Disposal, holding them to only one run to La Playa's seven. Devin Meheen pitched the win and also doubled for LP, as did Chris Prieto. LP's lead hitters were Rick Prieto, 2-4, Devin Meheen 2-3, and Bain Smith 2-4. Jimmy Rittermal made another outstanding catch for LP in right field.

In Mustang action, County Mounties defeated Dick Bruhn 16-9. Steven Biliouris and Nathan Heisel were pitchers of record. CM's Carl Dauphine made an inside homerun on a triple and an overthrow.

Triples also were collected for CM by Jim Rice and Steven Biliouris, who went 4-4, while Matt Travaille tripled for DB, going 3-4. Andrew Martin came up with a double and went 3-4 for DB and Kevin Quinn doubled for CM. Jim Rice made such an outstanding catch in center field that it brought cheers from parents of both teams.

Minor softball saw Marina Red Sox lose to Clam Box 5-2 last Wednesday. Missy Cardoza was winning pitcher and also doubled for CB, with Rebecca Prkrzywinski. It was quite a victory for CB, as Marina had only lost one game up to that point.

The next day, Clam Box tied Carmel Phillys 11-11. CB was in the lead 11-8 in the bottom of the 6th, when CP's Lisa Bray hit a triple bringing in three runs to tie the game.

Other triples were collected by CB's Amy Tarantino, Rebecca Prkrzywinski, and Lisa Desimone. Lisa Desimone, Suzanne Baker, Kelly Allen and Jenny Dyer all pitched well.

Musicians to decide on mediation

By ROBERT MISKIMON

STRIKING Monterey County Symphony musicians were to notify the orchestra board of directors today (May 23) whether they would accept an offer of outside mediation.

But Local 616 of the American Federation of Musicians — which represents the 65 striking orchestra members — so far has shown no interest in anything less than hiring conductor Oleg Kovalenko of Carmel as the direct means to settle the month-old dispute.

The strike was called April 26 when musicians said they had no other means to dramatize their frustration that the board of directors did not choose Kovalenko to replace retiring Maestro Haymo Taeuber.

Kovalenko was the clear favorite of orchestra members when he served as guest conductor last year, but the board instead offered the post of musical director to Clark Suttle of Phoenix, who withdrew his acceptance when he learned of the strike.

With no conductor in hand, musicians renewed their demand that Kovalenko be hired and last week officially placed the symphony on the union international list of unfair employers — an action intended to prevent the symphony from hiring other union musicians.

Despite this, the symphony board has stuck to its guns and given no indication that Kovalenko would even be considered as conductor. After the union action to place the symphony on the unfair list, board President William Doolittle acknowledged that the listing would impede symphony operations but called for mediation.

In a paid advertisement in this week's Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook, the symphony said that when Suttle withdrew as conductor, "the search process...was derailed. There is, at present, no process and there are no candidates.

"Faced with a situation where a successful symphony season cannot be conducted without the total cooperation of talented musicians and the substantial financial support of the community over and above concert ticket receipts...the board is proposing mediation to seek an agreement."

In a letter circulated to orchestra members by Jack Bayes, symphony personnel manager, the proposal for mediation of the strike was characterized as the "latest ploy" by the board of directors "to get us to accept anything other than Mr. Kovalenko.

•

'IT WOULD BE extremely expensive, and a waste of time. The issue is simply this: without Mr. Kovalenko as music director/conductor with a reasonable contract, our grievances cannot be settled," Bayes' letter stated.

"This board now has no orchestra, nor will they have one until they settle our grievances. If they continue to stall, they should resign or be removed by an outraged community."

Here is a point-by-point recital of the symphony board position, as stated in their paid advertisement, and the response from the orchestra personnel manager:

• DOOLITTLE: "For nearly two years, the association board carefully followed a clearly defined process to select a music director/conductor and was pleased to bring to the community eight candidates selected from a field of 175 applicants."

BAYES: "Mr. Kovalenko was selected to conduct only after much pressure from Mr. Taeuber and some orchestra members who knew of his abilities. From the first meeting between Mr. Kovalenko and board representatives, he was treated poorly by both management and board. It becomes obvious from hindsight that they had no intention of ever hiring him. This is further proven by their present intransigence in the face of orchestra and community pressure."

• DOOLITTLE: "The search process was an arduous undertaking. All the candidates were evaluated on the basis of their technical

Cultural panel nixes free concert

'CARMEL HAS driven us out of Carmel," Monterey County Symphony Association member Ron Weitzman said after cultural commission rejection of a plan to offer a free symphony concert in the Sunset Center parking lot May 26.

Carmel Community and Cultural Commissioners May 20 voted 3-1 to deny the request and said it would establish a precedent for other concerts in the parking lot.

Members also said approval would make it appear that the commission sides with the association in a bitter strike by orchestra members against the symphony.

After the meeting, Weitzman obviously was perturbed.

"I see that vote as a vote in favor of the board," Weitzman told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

Weitzman predicted that the orchestra now will offer its free concert outside of Carmel, although no final decision has been made.

Commissioner Jean White cast the only supportive vote.

She called the concept of a free concert in the parking lot "a good thing for the community. I think it's the community that's losing out because of the battle that's going on."

But White was outvoted by fellow commissioners Roger Fremier, George Gore and Natalie Murray.

Chairwoman Suzanne DeClercque does not vote in case of a tie. Commissioner Joyce Wright left the room during the discussion because she serves on the symphony board. Commissioner Lewis Heniford was absent.

Gore thought the musicians should discuss the free concert proposal with the board first. However, Weitzman said the board would reject any such plan by the orchestra.

There also were other logistical problems to overcome before a concert could be presented in the parking lot, commissioners said.

The symphony did not have seating plans, needed insurance and had yet to obtain a use permit from the board of adjustments.

Sunset Center Director Richard Tyler suggested that Weitzman apply for permission to present the free concert in the theater.

Tyler oversees the theater use and it is not subject to authorization by the commission, which meets monthly.

"I would have no problem with you performing in the theater. I would welcome it," Tyler said.

•

THERE IS is no indication whether the orchestra will accept Tyler's offer.

The next morning Weitzman provided a written statment detailing his reaction to the cultural commission decision:

Weitzman wrote that the symphony offer for a free concert is "a warm and generous gesture by the orchestra in view of its current impasse with the Monterey County Symphony board.

"As I left the meeting room (Tyler) followed me out the door. Trying to smooth what he evidently feared might be ruffled feathers, Tyler explained that the commission did not want to get involved in the dispute between the orchestra and the board.

"I replied in effect that that explanation was offensive nonsense, as I believe it was," Weitzman said.

"In its wish not to offend the symphony board the commission offended the symphony orchestra and at the same time deprived the people of Carmel of a free outdoor Sunday concert. I would say that is the story."

Expert outlines spiraling costs of U.S. defense

By ELAINE TAYLOR

APPROXIMATELY 60 percent of the total federal government general revenue is used for military expenditures, according to Michael Clossen, Director of the Center for Economic Conversion.

In a May 13 presentation to members of the New Forum at The Lodge in Pebble Beach, Clossen pointed out that the Pentagon budget has doubled from $146 billion in 1980 to $300 billion in 1985. He stressed that the Pentagon budget does not reflect all military spending by the federal government. "If this budget spiral continues, each family in America will contribute $20,000 [on average] to the military budget over the next five years," he said.

The New Forum meets monthly on the Monterey Peninsula to explore creative alternatives to warfare.

Clossen said massive military spending has widespread impacts. The Defense Department controls the largest block of industrial resources in our economy. In 1983, a total of $120 billion in prime contracts went out to 90,000 American firms, he said. In an effort to reduce the federal deficit, cuts in domestic spending have gone hand-in-hand with the buildup in military expenditures.

Three million persons were employed in defense projects in 1983, another 1 million are employed by the Pentagon and 3 million serve in the Armed Forces. Even so, "military spending is capital intensive," Clossen observed, adding that many more jobs would be generated if the same amount of money were spent for almost any other activity. He cited health care, education and mass transit as examples.

We're increasingly getting "locked into" an unstable military economy, Clossen said. The aerospace giants are almost entirely dependent on military contracts, for example. Ten thousand jobs were lost at Rockwell International in Southern California when the B1 bomber program was canceled in 1977.

Workers in military industries were likened to hostages by Clossen, even though many "would rather work on something they could believe in," he said. They don't feel they can make the financial sacrifice required to switch to the civilian sector of endeavor.

The Center for Economic Conversion, located in Mountain View, provides industries which are largely supported by military projects with strategies for an orderly transition to production of commercially marketable goods, Clossen noted.

Two-thirds of all federal research and development dollars went to the military in 1983, he said. More research and development money was spent on research for the B1 bomber than on research for the entire American steel industry in 1983, Clossen reported, and asked: "Is it any wonder we are having trouble competing in world markets?"

To reduce our dependence on military funds and to revitalize our ailing economy, Clossen stated that we need: 1) an administration which is committed to serious arms negotiations; 2) significant cuts in the Pentagon budget, not just a budget freeze; and 3) pursuit of economic alternatives to military production.

An orderly redirection of our resources is essential if we are to avoid serious economic dislocation, he said. Legislation (HR 229, HR 1066) has been introduced in Congress which would encourage large companies to explore conversion to production of commercially useful products. At the state level, Assemblyman Sam Farr has introduced AB 623 to set up a council that would monitor defense spending and develop strategies for diversifying the economy.

We need to reassess our national priorities, Clossen said, and emphasized such national needs as rebuilding decaying cities, revitalizing basic industries, rejuvenating mass transit systems, and expanding safe, non-polluting sources of energy.

"We need a conversion in values, too," Clossen said, adding that it is time to redefine security to encompass economic security.

"We need to acknowledge that the arms race is making the whole world more insecure; we must realize that our future is inextricably tied up to that of the Soviet Union, and we won't have security until the Russian people have security," Clossen said.

Economic conversion requires a more positive vision of the world, one which does not divide the human race into "good guys and bad guys," he said, emphasizing that a negative vision perpetuates the accelerating buildup of our arsenal of weapons.

"Conversion is not a Republican or Democratic issue. It is not a liberal or conservative issue. It is an issue of survival and of our future vitality as a country and as a human race," he said.

Those interested in the New Forum may call 624-7494 or 624-1803. A tape of Clossen's presentation can be obtained at the Thunderbird Bookshop in The Barnyard.

Food vendors, artisans sought

Applications for artists, craftsmen and food vendors are now being taken for participation in the Monterey Bay Arts and Crafts Fair.

The fair will take place July 13 and 14 in the Custom House Plaza in Monterey. It is planned to coincide with the opening weekend of the Monterey Bay Theatrefest, a free "all day" theater festival that will run five weekends and will feature five different productions daily. Proceeds will benefit GroveMont Community Theatre and the Monterey Bay Theatrefest, non-profit organizations.

PINE WHISPERS

Carmel Youth Center rocks with sounds of the 1950s

'WE'RE GONNA rock around the clock tonight, we're gonna rock, rock, rock till broad daylight..."

And with heels twisting and hands flying in all directions, about 300 parents and friends of Carmel rocked the night away Saturday, May 18 in celebration of the reopening of the Carmel Youth Center.

The room shook with the sounds of the Beach Boys and Buddy Holly, the tables overflowed with chips, crackers and dips, but nothing compared with the leather jackets, bobby socks, short cheerleader outfits and Bermuda shorts worn by the guests.

Carole Colter, Youth Center program director, said twice the number expected came to the party. "It seemed like people in the community just came out of the woodwork to help support the Youth Center! It was wonderful," she said.

Colter personifies the high level of energy that has been put into remodeling the Youth Center and making it available to area youths. After new board members were selected in March, Colter was hired to set up new programs to start the ball rolling. With a new steering committee to assist, they looked at what the needs of Carmel youth are.

The first order of business was a facelift for the inside of the building and the addition of equipment so the kids could have their hamburgers in the snack bar. Now students who join the center can have more wholesome food at minimal costs since the charge is just enough to cover the basic cost of preparation of the food.

Finally, with the facelift complete, new programs are now being started. In addition to the 50s party which was planned as an opening celebration for the adults, on Friday, May 24 students in grades five through eight will celebrate from 3 p.m. until 9 p.m. at the center with video movies, games, other projects and plenty of food.

A Hawaiian party for grades nine through 12 has been planned by the high school students who have picked their own theme and will do all their own decorating.

They also have done all their own advertising for the event, put posters up in the school halls and gone to other schools to let students know about the event, since the Carmel Youth Center serves all children who live within the Carmel Unified School District.

Partygoers will dance to the live music of the Dirty Looks Band, which was a smash success at the Carmel High School prom this year. Not only have the students themselves been in charge of all the preparations for the Hawaiian celebration, but they also will provide their own security guards and will not allow any parents or adults — except Carole Colter — to attend.

One wonders, though, whether the youths' Hawaiian dance could possibly end on such a sweet and romantic note as the adults' 50s party, when the leather jackets and Bermuda shorts swayed to the haunting Goodnight Irene. (By Susan Bock).

LYCEUM CELEBRATES 25TH ANNIVERSARY

The sunny library at York School was filled with the sparkling laughter of teachers, friends and major contributors of the Lyceum of the Monterey Peninsula Friday, May 17 as they enjoyed the appreciation party given by the board of directors to celebrate the Lyceum 25th anniversary and in recognition of all volunteer instructors who taught classes throughout the year.

The Lyceum was founded in 1960 by Vera Hering on a single contribution of $75 from the Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Service. The purpose was to provide stimulating and enriching educational programs to individual students tutored by one instructor.

Over the years, the Lyceum has expanded to encompass a wider range of programs and to provide specialized programs for more than 4,000 school children throughout the Monterey Peninsula as a supplement to classes taught in their schools. Any student is eligible to attend the variety of classes offered.

The only criterion is an intellectual curiosity in the fields of art, science and humanities. There are mentor programs and small classes taught by a host of individuals who openly share their avocations, time and talent with these young people.

This summer appears to be full of bright new learning experiences. Beginning in July, a morning Triad Program at Forest Grove School will be offered. In the afternoons, the July Firefly will offer three, one-hour classes with 15 minute recesses for children in the first through eighth grades grouped in appropriate age categories. Programs include humanities with storytelling and children's literature, puppetry, and performing arts including dance, drama and music, as well as science — wildlife studies and the study of energy.

Visual arts classes will offer students painting and drawing and clay as well as bookbinding. A student may, for example, write a story in a literature class, act it out in one of the drama classes and then bind his story in the bookbinding class. There are numerous possibilities for the student in include in this month of learning experience.

Registration is handled through the Lyceum office at 1073 Sixth St. in Monterey or by calling 372-6098. (By Susan Bock).

CONSCIENCE OF CARMEL

BY GUNNAR NORBERG

Put 'teeth' in appeals

WHEN I READ newspaper reports of the May 8 meeting of the Carmel City Council, I was greatly astonished.

I learned that the effort made by Councilman Jim Wright to bring back before the council a serious matter upon which the planning commission had just acted turned out to be completely futile because of a surprising technicality.

There is, and there has been for many years, a provision in the municipal code which has allowed individual city councilmen the right to bring planning commission decisions back to the council for final review and action before those decisions take effect.

During my 16 years as a city councilman, I used this right at various times to bring what I considered questionable planning commission decisions before my fellow councilmen for a final review.

Whenever I brought such matters before the city council, I presented my arguments for doing so from my seat at the council table, and when finally a vote was taken on the question at issue, my vote was recorded along with those of my fellow councilmen.

What amazed me about what happened when Councilman Wright asked the city council to decide whether to approve a planning commission decision in the Sands Motel case was that Councilman Wright stepped down from his place at the council table and stood at the audience microphone to make what was called his appeal against what the planning commission had decided. He then stayed away from his council seat when the other members of the council voted on the disputed planning commission Sands Motel decision.

Without Councilman Wright's participation, the vote by the remaining four members of the council resulted in a 2-2 tie. Since a tie vote results in nullity, Councilman Wright's appeal failed to reverse the planning commission decision.

This decision allowed the Sands Motel owners to take further steps to rebuild their 42-unit motel, 120-seat restaurant, and to add a 3,000 sq. ft. office complex, without first having to prepare an environmental impact report.

Why did Councilman Wright step down from his council seat to seek a reversal of the planning commission decision, and why did he then abstain from voting on the issue?

He did so because he had been so advised by the city attorney. And why had the city attorney so advised him? Because there was the possibility that Councilman Wright's participation might have resulted in a court challenge.

What troubled me most about all this was that Councilman Wright's appeal failed when — if he had voted along with his fellow councilmen — it obviously would have succeeded, for the vote then would have been 3-2 in favor of his appeal.

Here it may be useful to look at a bit of city council history. In 1929, the city council abolished its planning commission, and it was not until 1946 that the city council decided to reestablish the planning commission. However, when the 1946 council decided to reactivate such a commission, it wanted to make sure that the council itself would always be immediately aware of any decisions its newly activated planning commission would make.

To accomplish this, the council placed one of its own members — Donald Craig — on the planning commission, and he remained a member until the end of his second council term in 1954. At that time, and in the years since, no city councilman has performed the additional duties of a planning commissioner.

However, it was believed that by providing for an appeal process to be used by individual councilmen to return questioned planning commission decisions to the city council for final review, the city council could remain fully in control of ultimate decision-making.

In the Sands Motel case, the failure of Councilman Wright's appeal does not mean that the Sands Motel owners now have a final green light to go ahead with their elaborate rebuilding plans. On June 19 or June 26 the Sands Motel proprietors will appear before the planning commission to seek the use permit they would be required to have before they could start any rebuilding.

And because of the excessive number of motel units which the Sands Motel people seek to replace, the restaurant they want to restore, and the new office annex they want to build — all on the site of the present Sands Motel — it seems unlikely they would have an easy time convincing the planning commission to issue the use permit.

•

HOWEVER I believe it is important now for the city council to give serious thought to the provision of a legal mechanism which could lead to the return for final review and action by the council of any future questioned commission-made or staff-made decisions. While such a legal mechanism might not often be used — in my own case, I used the appeal process perhaps six or seven times while a city councilman — it could at some future time abort some unfortunate commission-made or staff-made decision before serious harm to the community could result.

There seems to be the possibility, no matter how remote or how unlikely, that the existing provision in the municipal code for the kind of appeal which Councilman Wright attempted to use to seek reversal of a planning commission decision could someday lead to a court challenge. Something else should perhaps be put into place in city law to provide for the kind of last-ditch control by the council, to which I have referred.

Because the city council in this, or any, city is the top policy-making body within its environs, it can legislate means to insure that it has not only the first say but also the last in the maintenance of the character of the city it serves.

In Part X of the Carmel Municipal Code — which has been extensively recodified as Chapter 17 of that code — the first section is identified as the "purpose clause" and spells out in considerable detail the fact that Carmel is a "residential city wherein business and commerce" are "subordinated to its residential character."

Perhaps in some added section below that "purpose clause" there could be one which would provide precisely the kind of final review and action by the city council on disputed matters.

No doubt City Atty. Don Freeman and City Administrator Douglas Schmitz, along with Planning Director Diane White, could put together an ordinance which could include needed details to produce the kind of council controls to which I've referred. If the city council were soon to enact such an ordinance, the fiasco which occurred in Councilman Wright's failed try at "appealing" would not be repeated. And like efforts by future councilmen in similar situations would achieve their intended result. (Copyright 1985 Gunnar Norberg.)

BUSINESS BEAT
BY NANCY HILLS

How to order that rare European car

I THOUGHT that the Carmel Cars, Inc. mentioned in the May 9 Business Beat column sounded so interesting that I decided to give them a call and find out more about what they were doing.

Carmel Cars on Lincoln Street between Seventh and Eighth avenues is a car brokerage for European cars that cannot be bought through dealers in the United States. Carmel Cars will individually order any kind of European car and have it delivered to major West Coast ports.

This type of business, referred to in recent national press coverage as the "grey market," received attention when it was found that some of the cars sold through the grey market were impounded because they did not meet highway safety requirements here in the United States.

Carmel Cars owner Dr. John Peterson, an Army doctor stationed at Fort Ord, and general manager Michael Keeney, a former automotive technology teacher from Monterey Peninsula College, both felt that the coverage has overstated the number of people who have encountered problems. They said more recent articles have given a much lower estimate of the number of cars that have been impounded.

"There are a lot of people now doing grey market cars," Keeney said. "There are some people on the fringe that give it a bad name."

"We (Carmel Cars) have all the licenses and bonding necessary and have spent many, many months checking everything out," Keeney said.

Some of the cars that were impounded, Peterson said, were "hot" or stolen cars. Carmel Cars, Peterson said, carefully checks out every registration to ensure that does not happen.

Grey market, Keeney said, "is a colloquial term that has sort of stuck" to describe cars sold in Europe and brought to the United States not through a dealership.

Keeney said one of the reasons why the grey market has "taken off" is the availability through brokers of European models not offered here in the United States.

"American dealers might have 10 models (of a car manufactured in Europe) but in Europe there may be over 48 models made," he said. "Dealers have certain obligations contractually with the parent company and are obligated to sell those 10 models."

As to why the American dealers are limited to the number of models they can sell, Keeney said: "That's the big question in the sky."

All cars that are brought over from Europe must be brought into compliance with both state and federal safety standards, which are much stricter than European standards, Keeney said. Different states can have very different codes.

"There are many places that do conversions," Keeney said, and added that all Carmel Cars are thoroughly inspected. Conversion to meet safety requirements is included as part of the purchase price.

"You cannot drive a car until it has been converted," he said. It is the eagerness of some buyers, he added, to take the car out for just a quick drive that has gotten some people into trouble.

Carmel Cars, Keeney said, acts as a brokerage for used and new European cars and said "every used car is hand-picked." The cars are thoroughly inspected in Europe as well as in the United States. New cars are also inspected and both types carry warranties.

It takes eight weeks, Keeney said, to get a new car and three to four weeks for a used car if the buyer will take what Keeney calls a "spot car" — a car already available. Orders for cars that must be searched out take longer.

"These cars are very luxurious with special features that you would not normally find over here," Keeney said.

Carmel Cars, Keeney added, handles cars from all of Europe, including England.

"We broker Jaguar, Rolls Royce, BMW, Mercedes, Ferrari and Porsche," he said.

Keeney said the buying power of the U.S. dollar right now has also contributed to the success of the grey market and, of course, bringing them in at European factory prices.

CREAM AWNINGS FOR COURT OF FOUNTAINS

The May 15 meeting of the Carmel Planning Commission finally settled the question of cream or green awnings in the Court of the Fountains.

The planning commission has approved the cream or white awnings that were installed instead of the green originally approved in last August.

Since then, approval of the white awnings has bounced between the city council and planning commission. Now everyone can cool off.

The Carmel Plaza got its two new interior store fronts approved but ran into opposition with its two new exterior fronts on Ocean Avenue.

Assistant City Planner Brian Roseth said the fronts had so much glass on the first floor of the building that it looked like the second story was unsupported. Back to the drawing board, I guess.

COTTAGE ROW IS FILLING UP

The much talked-about Cottage Row on the corner of San Carlos Street and Sixth Avenue is slowly but surely filling up with shops.

One of the latest to open is Carmel Pendleton, owned by Don and Lassie Colbourn. The shop, said Don Colbourn, is the only exclusively Pendleton shop in Northern California and carries the Pendleton full line of clothing.

"There are five Pendleton shops in Southern California but this is the first one in Northern California," Colbourn said. "The concept of Pendleton shops is new. Pendleton is owned and operated by the Bishop family of Portland, Ore. and they really take a lot of pride in the product. They did not want to take the chance of anyone having control over the Pendleton name."

The wool, Colbourn said, is bought by Pendleton, which "scours it," makes it into yarn, then fabric, then into Pendleton clothing or blankets.

"Everything is done in the United States," Colbourn said.

The Colbourns live in Walnut Creek, where Don Colbourn owns a real estate brokerage firm. They hope to be able to move to Carmel with their two teenage sons next year and already have rented a house for their frequent visits.

Though in real estate now, Colbourn said his first love is retailing.

"I worked in retail for 13 years before real estate. My last job was with Joseph Magnin's main store in San Francisco where I was first the manager then the regional manager," he said. "When Amfac bought J. Magnin's and it was no longer a family-owned specialty store, I left."

His wife, Colbourn said, is an artist and has sold her work in San Francisco.

The Carmel Pendleton shop was one of the stores involved in the "hours of operation" controversy earlier this year that inspired the Carmel Board of Adjustments to request the city council to pass an urgency ordinance. That measure imposed restrictions on the hours new businesses could stay open when it was found that the Cottage Row leases required the shops to be open until 9 p.m. certain nights of the week. Colbourn said he plans to keep his shop open late on Thursday, Friday and Saturday for nine months out of the year and for six nights a week for the three summer months.

"Just last night (May 14) we had the store open at 8:30 p.m. while putting it together and we must have had 12 to 13 people stick their heads in," Colbourn said. He believed they were half locals and half tourists.

CARMEL MODELING AGENCY LAUNCHED

A model modeling agency is the aim of Elizabeth Brown — wife of Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook Publisher Bill Brown — and Carolyn Goodall as they set up Elizabeth — Models in Carmel.

"We felt that there was not an agency that caters to the young man or lady in our area that wants to become a model," said Goodall, who works as office manager and bookkeeper at the Pine Cone/Outlook.

Goodall said that although there could be exceptions, the minimum age for the models is 17 and the emphasis will be on the 17 to 25 year olds.

"I think the area needs something particularly because there are so few businesses that are geared toward young people around here," said Elizabeth Brown, whose background is in theater and drama. She feels she has a special empathy for the needs of young people in the modeling profession.

"The services our agency intends to provide for our models will be patterned after the Eileen Ford modeling agency," Goodall said.

"Our agency has agreements with professionals in the different aspects of the business such as photographers, makeup artist, and choreographer who will work in conjunction with us as a team. We will create and promote the model. We hope to be the training ground for young men and women who are serious about modeling," Goodall said.

"We want it to be that if — and hopefully when — our models decide that they wish to go to a larger metropolitan area such as San Francisco or Los Angeles they are packaged and ready to walk into one of the major modeling agencies and be accepted," Goodall said.

"It is so easy to get exploited in this field," Goodall said. Elizabeth — Models will promote and represent their people to ensure that will not happen.

The "kickoff" for Elizabeth — Models, Goodall said, will be at the Monterey County Fairgrounds Country Music Monterey Weekend June 16 in a fashion show that is part of an auction to raise funds for United Way.

THIS TRUCKER WON'T BLOCK TRAFFIC

Package delivery is always a source of much discussion in this town.

It is particularly a source of conversation in the car — not always polite — when you have a short period of time to get from one side of town to another or you will lose your job/deal/date/mind and there is a large immobile vehicle that sits in the street like the Hoover Dam.

It's always such fun get the timing just right on when to gun your car around it — sort of like white water rafting on wheels.

Robert MacDonald, who has started a small package delivery service called Mac-Pak, Inc., is one delivery man who won't leave his truck in the street.

"I don't want to get my vehicle in danger," he said.

MacDonald recently set up his delivery service from Carmel to anywhere in the surrounding area — up to San Francisco — when after three years he found there was not enough business on the peninsula in his profession of computer repair. He said he is getting bonded and can carry up to 85 pounds.

"What I am trying to achieve is a quality service. I was in a field (computer repair) for many years where you try to give personalized service to the customer. I understand it," he said. "Too many people just do things to get a paycheck and forget it."

MacDonald said he will do emergency deliveries "anytime."

THE RIGHT STUFF FOR SERIOUS WRITERS

I finally tracked down Charles and Karen Mundy of Antique Accessories of London located in one of the gazebos in the Court of the Fountains on Mission Street. Actually, it is more accurate to say that they tracked me down. No matter, the point is that we got a chance to talk to each other.

The Mundys' petite store specializes in English writing antiques and desk accessories that they collected themselves while living in England.

"Many people have told us that they have never seen such a large collection of antique desk accessories anywhere before," Karen Mundy said.

The collection includes inkwells of glass and porcelain with and without silver, travel, novelty Victorian animal inkwells and full inkstands along with many kinds of antique pens.

SERRA BICENTENNIAL

BY MSGR. FRANCES WEBER

Serra and the bishopric

IT HAS long been the practice of the Holy See to bestow broad faculties on certain priests laboring in missionary areas regarding the administration of the sacraments.

One such prerogative, generally delegated to local superiors, concerns the conferral of confirmation, a faculty customarily reserved, in most parts of the Christian world, for those who enjoy episcopal ordination.

Such an apostolic concession was exercised in California by Fray Junipero Serra. The venerable Franciscan presidente sought and received authorization "so that he could visit the missions and confirm the neophytes, lest they be deprived of the great spiritual good to be had from the effects of this holy sacrament."

Judging from remarks of his biographer, there were those apparently who viewed such actions on Serra's part as indicative of episcopal aspirations. Not so, according to Francisco Palou: Junipero Serra "was so far removed from seeking this dignity or even desiring it, that he rather devised means to flee it, because of his profound humility and his fervent desire to labor in the vineyard of the Lord."

Palou further mentioned that after the establishment of Mission San Carlos, "His Reverence learned that a courier at Madrid had written to the Reverend Father Guardian of our college that a great honor was waiting the Reverend Father Junipero."

When word reached Monterey of the "great honor," Serra, "fearful that he would lose before God the merit of his labors in these spiritual conquests through receiving in this world the reward that was foretold in that letter," immediately resolved to refuse the distinction or any other which would forestall his being able to live "as an apostolic missionary among the infidels and to shed his blood for their conversion."

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

According to a survey taken by the Gallup Organization, Americans are spending more and more time in their gardens. There are now 53 million gardening households in the U.S. Married gardeners aged 50 and over lead all other groups in growing their own food. Gardens For All, a non-profit organization, estimates that a $30 investment in 500 square feet of space can yield $400 worth of food, not a bad return for seniors on a food budget.

Experts at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services warn that elderly persons constitute one of the groups most at risk for damage from exposure to the sun. In addition, many drugs commonly taken by seniors increase that risk. These include certain tranquilizers, high blood pressure medications, sulfa drugs, oral diabetic drugs, anti-vomiting drugs and some antibiotics.

The department advises seniors to consult their physicians regarding safe exposure times and, possibly, the use of screening lotions.

Squid: it's time we took this mollusc 'seriously'

By ANNE PAPINEAU

CALAMARI ARE for eating. Squidding means "goin' fishin' " for those 10-armed cephalopods.

And Loligo opalescens (the local squid variety) — well, they may unlock the secret of universal communication.

Small wonder then that the Great Monterey Squid Festival will return to the Monterey Fairgrounds in an expanded format Saturday and Sunday, May 25-26.

A nobler mollusc there never was, and certainly an apt subject for a festival. More apt, perhaps, than the garlic cloves and artichoke hearts feted annually just north of here.

There is more to the squid story than dousing them in onion ring batter and chasing them with a light beer. To know squid only as those often rubbery, pale little meat rings is to do oneself an injustice. Indeed, when we blanket the deceased mollusc in tomato sauce, bread crumbs or cheese, we blind ourselves to its qualities of true greatness, according to connoiseurs.

Asked to rate the intelligence of squid in relation to human beings and dolphins, William Gilly, assistant professor of biology at Hopkins Marine Station in Pacific Grove, said: "I would think they're above either."

The focus of Gilly's research at Hopkins, a facility operated by Stanford University, is the nerve cells of squid: how single nerve cells function, how they transmit and process information.

"I think they communicate with each other more quickly by changing color than we do by talking," Gilly observed. "If we could capture their color-changing mechanism and incorporate it into our skin, if we could find the genes that control that mechanism and incorporate them through genetic engineering techniques."

If. If. Indeed, these possibilities boggle the imagination. Here we have a species that recognizes skin color not as an excuse for exclusion or surface value judgments but as a communication medium.

LOLIGO Opalescens,* the local squid variety, garners high intelligence ratings from biologists like William Gilly of Hopkins Marine Station. They're not intelligent enough, however, to escape fishermen's nets, or even the divers who gathered these squid for display at the Monterey Bay Aquarium on Cannery Row. (Photograph courtesy the Monterey Bay Aquarium.)

The marine biologist, who said he has "looked at 10,000 squid informally over the last five years," added:

"Since light travels faster than sound, there is unlimited possibility for communication with other people and over long distances, too. We could probably eliminate the long distance telephone."

•

TAKING HIS cue from Loligo opalescens, Gilly declined to interpret the precise messages conveyed by squid coloration. His field is neuro-physiology, not semantics. What the assistant professor will do is describe squid communication as it occurs in the field, so to speak.

"When the squids mate, they wrestle around a lot," Gilly noted. "During this period of wrestling, the male is basically trying to wrestle the female to subdue her and have a successful mating. He has to hold her tentacles and transfer little packets of sperm. "A lot of other males keep trying to wrestle the female away, so only the biggest male is able to undertake this rapturous union.

"Once the male does get the female oriented in this stereotyped sexual position for the mating and manage to survive the onslaught of all these other frustrated males who don't have a female.

"Once he gets her in exactly the right position, he turns his tentacles a beautiful bright red, crimson. Once he does that, the other males don't try to attack them and break up their little thing. Biologically this is a signal, 'I'm strong enough to have this successful mating. You'll only be disturbing the climax of our efforts here.' What the emotion is I would have to leave to the reader."

Gilly added that the union of squid "is not a five minute affair. They mate in this position for maybe an hour while the female starts laying eggs."

Fortunately for us, it would appear that Loligo opalescens has no designs on world domination. With its superior communication methods, the squid population could probably crush the entire cruise ship industry inside of a week.

Clever and communicative as squid are, Gilly pointed out there is one way in which the tentacled creatures are "especially dumb."

While the nets used by local fishermen contain mesh that is, for the most part, "quite enormous in relation to squid size," the molluscs allow themselves to remain trapped within it. They collectively flee to the center of the nets, to be hauled to the tables of Fisherman's Wharf restaurants or Squid Festival food booths.

"The squids' cleverness at escaping things does them in, because they flee the net and cluster in the middle of it," Gilly noted.

So not to worry. For one more Squid Festival, we rule them. Squid are our snacks, our side dishes, our prey. But just imagine, if squid held grudges, we'd probably be fishing for another festival theme right now.

Squid Festival to honor fishermen and the fished

SQUID. Try 'em sauced, quiched, marinated or on a stick. See 'em floating in a tank or on the front of a T-shirt.

The second annual Great Monterey Squid Festival arrives this weekend, from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, May 25-26, at the Monterey County Fairgrounds.

Sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Monterey, the festival has expanded in terms of both booths and time. Last year, the first Squid Festival attracted so many visitors during its one-day run that a squid shortage ensued.

The Monterey Kiwanis Club hopes to sidestep problems of parking and squid depletion by offering "a lot more booths, a lot more of everything," said Bob Massaro, Squid Festival coordinator.

Live entertainment will be featured both days, from mariachi music to country and western bands.

However familiar diners may be with the many culinary personalities assumed by calamari, there is bound to be some type of squid dish represented at the festival they've yet to sample.

The Great Monterey Squid Festival will afford the adventurous a chance to order squid cioppino, fried squid, squid quiche, squid teriyaki, squid on a stick, marinated squid, squid Siciliano, plus pasta, pesto and squid.

Also on the menu will be such unconventional and unsquid-like entrees as kahlua pig with rice, fried mushrooms, chocolate-dipped strawberries, croissants, fried Monterey jack cheese, baked potatoes, apple turnovers, barbecued ribs, shrimp cocktail, roast beef sandwiches and more. Even the all-American hamburger and french fries will be accounted for at this not-strictly-squid happening.

THE CULTURAL heritage of Greece will be represented at the Great Monterey Squid Festival by this Hellenic folk dance troupe. Members include, back row, from left, Lou Pales, Peter Marra, Darold Skerritt and Hugh Zike; front row, from left, Chuck Chernoff, Joan Roberts, Joanna Bonnell, Maxine Myer, Geri Snider and Karen Yedlika.

The · Cannery Row Foundation and Monterey Bay Aquarium both will present slide and lecture programs that highlight their activities. These educational and entertainment programs are included in the Squid Festival admission price: $3 for adults; $1.50 for ages 11 and under or 60 and over. Tickets are available at the Fairgrounds gate, Fairgrounds and Garden roads in Monterey.

•

ALL PROCEEDS from the Great Monterey Squid Festival are donated to local charities, Massaro said.

Last year, the Squid Festival raised $72,000 for such non-profit organizations as Meals on Wheels, the Special Olympics and a scholarship fund for high school students.

From 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., four free shuttle buses will help transport Squid Festival visitors to and from their vehicles. These buses will operate from the main gate of the fairgrounds, along Garden Road and to the lower Monterey Peninsula College parking lot on Fremont Boulevard.

The Monterey County Fairgrounds is accessible off highways 1 and 68 in Monterey. For more information about the Great Monterey Squid Festival, call 649-5900 or 649-6544.

Vaccinate that pet at a reduced fee Saturday

Reduced-fee rabies vaccination clinics are offered by the Monterey County Health Department and the Monterey Bay Veterinary Medical Association.

Dog owners whose pets are not under the regular care of a veterinarian are urged to take this opportunity to have their animals vaccinated at a reduced fee of $3.

Monterey County requires that all dogs be vaccinated against rabies and also licensed. Most cases of rabies in dogs result from exposure to rabid wild animals such as bats, skunks, raccoons and foxes.

As a convenience to owners, the required 1985-86 city and county dog licenses may be obtained at the clinics. The local clinic schedule is as follows:

- S.P.C.A.: 12:30 p.m.-2:30 p.m. Saturday, May 25, Highway 68.

For more information, call the county health department, 899-4271 or 1-757-1061.

Christian Science lecture planned

JUAN CARLOS Lavigne, an Argentinian businessman and former atheist, will address the question "Can God Protect Us?" during a free lecture Thursday, May 23 at Sunset Center in Carmel.

The protecting presence of God is the theme of a Christian Science lecture to be given 7:30 p.m. Thursday, May 23 in Sunset Center, Carmel.

Speaker is Juan Carlos Lavigne of Buenos Aires, Argentina. A professed atheist for more than 20 years, Lavigne recalls that a business crisis prompted him to search the Bible and Christian Science writings for security and protection. In the 15 years since that experience, Lavigne said his conviction of God's protecting power has deepened.

The Lavigne lecture is sponsored by members of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, of Carmel. He will be introduced by Betty Jo Cost, a local art gallery owner.

All Christian Science lectures are free, and free child care will be provided in an adjoining room at Sunset Center, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel.

American Opera Company brings pleasant evening

'A GRAND Night for Music'' it was indeed with the American Opera Company last Saturday at Sunset Center.

Sponsored by Benjamin and Judith Goldman of Do Re Mi Music, the budding American Opera Company wants to bring opera to the Monterey Peninsula. This concert served to showcase some of the talent, and to spread the word about the venture.

With a quartet of soloists, a small ensemble, and a piano the program ranged through musical comedy, light opera and heavier opera. The offerings were mostly old chestnuts, some of which seem to have become new chestnuts. When was the last time you heard the Indian Love Call?

Reversing the usual program order, which takes us from heavier to lighter, the program opened with selections from Rodgers and Hammerstein, Lehar, and others. The performances were generally good, pleasantly and humorously delivered. Especially lovely was Norma Jean Hodges' Villia, from The Merry Widow.

After intermission, we were transported to the world of (mostly) Italian opera. The chorus opened with Va Pensiero, from Verdi's Nabuco. This needed a little more Italian blood; it was too restrained. This chorus should bring out the "Italian" that is latent in everyone.

Linda Purdy and Alan Gilbert were very entertaining in the opening duet from Mozart's Marriage of Figaro, in a witty translation that might help to convince some persons that one never loses so much in opera as when one doesn't know what is going on.

A tutti number closed the show, quartet and ensemble collaborating in the drinking song from Verdi's La Traviata. It got a rousing ovation, so the group did what is truly proper for an encore — they repeated it.

•

PRESUMABLY, the featured soloists are the nucleus of the company. Soprano Norma Jean Hodges has a small but nicely clear voice, with easy, true high notes. Linda Purdy's voice is larger, with more of the coloring associated with a mezzo soprano.

Furthermore, she appears to have a very large range. Jose DeCordoba, tenor, was clearly more at home in Italian opera than elsewhere, and produced a pleasant sound.

Alan Gilbert, baritone, has a lot of presence in his sound and provides a solid bass in the ensembles. He also displayed considerable versatility, from the bathtub-baritone favorite Stout-Hearted Men to Giovanni's cynical canzonetta, Deh Vieni.

All in all, it was an enjoyable evening. There was some carelessness in releases all the way around (the musician's scourge!), including the choral group. The four soloists didn't achieve an ideal blend together but the duets were generally more satisfying. Perhaps as the company expands, the directors will have the luxury of improving on such matters.

Simple but effective staging carried the program through smoothly. This format runs the danger of being a list of songs sung by a list of people. Although it looked simple and unaffected from the outside, there was considerable planning to get that number of entrances and exits choreographed, and to have sensible musical transitions. Benjamin Goldman is credited as both artistic and general director. Incidentally, he also sneaked into the ensemble for the final chorus.

William Purdy performed yeoman service at the piano.

Lynn Larson autographs new poster

Carmel poster artist Lynn Larson will be on hand at the Artist's Palette in the Barnyard, Carmel Saturday, May 25 to sign the fourth in her series of "Bay to Breakers" posters. The autograph party is scheduled from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m.

This year, Larson uses her characteristic pastel colors and flowing images to portray the Arboretum in Golden Gate Park surrounded by azaleas in a field of blue.

Sponsored by the Art of Running, International, the artist credits the commission of these posters as the source of her continuing involvement with pastel shades.

"I was working in bold primary colors up until 1981 but I was searching for a new direction," Larson said.

"When Andy and Donna McLeod came to San Francisco in preparation for the Art of Running's involvement with the 'Bay to Breakers' run, they saw the city as pastel as opposed to the bold contrasting images of New York.

"It was simply through a fluke that I was recommended to them by the San Francisco Examiner. It was through their input plus a crazy deadline schedule that I was forced to develop a style that captures the identity of the 'Bay to Breakers' run and has since come to be a part of my artistic identity as well."

Each poster in the series captures a different aspect of the run. Previous subjects have been the famous Cliff House restaurant, the trolley cars, a comic event and social runners. Next year, Hayes Street and the colorful "painted lady" Victorians will be immortalized.

Larson's individual posters have won several awards. Other Larson commissions include the Highlands Inn, the Barnyard and her personal involvement with CircleVision, a group dedicated to world peace and communication.

The Artist's Palette is in the Barnyard, Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Road, Carmel. For more information, call 624-6755.

THEATER REVIEW

BY JOANNE TENENBAUM

'Sugar' isn't perfect but it's entertaining

CURRENTLY onstage at Monterey Peninsula College is the musical Sugar, based on the popular film Some Like It Hot.

This ambitiously mounted production, directed by Morgan Stock, benefits from the luscious presence of Katie Delay in the title role, colorful, whimsical sets by D. Thomas Beck, and eye-catching costumes designed by Constance Gamiere.

Perhaps most of all, however, the show benefits from an invisible tour de force by Suzanna Miller, who, at last Friday night's performance, dubbed the singing and speaking role of Sugar with such nuance and charm that the unthinkible worked: we saw Ms. Delay onstage, lip-synching her lyrics and lines because a bad cold stole her voice, and we heard Suzanna Miller, almost always on time, more than adequately dub her lines and lyrics.

It should not have worked, but it did. Miller, last seen as Sally Bowles in the Wharf Theater production of Cabaret, is a versatile actress with a great deal of generosity. Since MPC employs no understudies, it is not too much to say that Miller's vocal pinch-hitting made it possible for the show to be performed at all.

As Sugar opens, two down-at-the-heels musicians take refuge as members of an all-women's traveling band to avoid being permanently planted by a tap-dancing gangster after they witness, quite by chance, a gangland multiple murder. Not unlike the film Tootsie, Sugar exploits the comic possibilities of the basic situation.

The sax player in drag (John Newkirk) falls in love with Sugar, the band's lead singer who, thinking he is a woman, confides to him her hopes and dreams. Meanwhile, his fellow refugee (Kelley Alexander) is pursued by an aged millionaire (Scott Mattraw).

Sugar's storyline is sometimes sacrificed to musicalization. Sugar, the winsome lead singer, is addicted to alcohol and is almost desperate to marry a millionaire and get off the road before the mileage shows.

Although Sugar expresses these concerns early in the play, her plight is not convincing, partly because Katie Delay is a vision of health, youth and loveliness that speaks of very low mileage and partly because the action downplays her desperation.

Although Sugar sometimes lurches along clumsily, in the main it is highly entertaining. Newkirk and Alexander are extremely funny in drag, with Alexander making the most of a perfected falsetto that he drops with impeccable timing to create a comic high point that sets the tone for the performance. It is upbeat, farcical, and sets the audience roaring.

SUGAR employs several changes of scene, and each set is more fun to look at than the last. A brightly colored passenger train opens to reveal a bevy of berths, used to good advantage in the number Sun On My Face.

Later in the show, a cartoon-like yacht, brightly colored and flying a peppy fixed flag, descends from the fly. Somewhere in the middle of the show, a brightly painted backdrop conveys beach and sea and sky while orange arches create a graceful veranda. This show is strong on the visuals; costumes and scenery work well together.

So far, so good. But there are moments during the evening that do not work, and many of these happen in the chorus line. A number employing a masked chorus of "old" men is oddly surreal in the show's otherwise whimsical setting and seems to insult the aged with forced querulous gestures and hints of ineptitude.

Hey, Why Not, a number showcasing Delay's considerable dance talent, fails in the chorus as well. The men are simply no match for her skill and there are some outright clumsy moments as they miss their cues.

On the other hand, Howard Hinckley's tapdanced vendetta announcement, backed up by Lorraine Olsen and Suzanna Miller unobtrusively dressed as male gangsters, has real panache and perfected timing.

On balance, Sugar isn't perfect, but it is entertaining.

★★★

CORRECTION: The May 2 review inadvertendly ascribed Orpheus, then playing at Cherry Hall, to playwright Jean Genet. Orpheus is the work of French playwright Jean Cocteau.

"DIRTY OLD Men Need Love" sings millionaire yacht owner Osgood Fielding (Scott Mattraw) to bandmember Sugar Kane (Katie DeLay) in a scene from the Monterey Peninsula College production of Sugar. The musical opens this week in the main theater on campus.

New acting awards to honor the late Charlotte Perry

The annual Santa Catalina School Evening of the Arts will take place at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, May 23 in the school's Performing Arts Center.

The event will include performances of instrumental and choral music, dance and drama and a display of student work in the visual arts in the lobby featuring drawing, painting, photography and applied design.

Two musical numbers of particular interest will be a performance of J.S. Bach's Bouree by four flautists and marimba player Greg Janusz, chairman of the music department; plus a performance of Darius Milhaud's Scaramouche by Adrienne Nordstrom and Irene Schweininger.

The evening's finale will be the first presentation of the Charlotte Perry Acting Awards, named for the woman who directed the school's drama program from 1956 to 1982. Presentation of the "Perrys" will be made by the woman who conceived the idea of the awards, Rosamond Goodrich Zanides, a student of Charlotte Perry in the 1950s and her colleague in the Santa Catalina School Drama Department two decades later.

THEATER REVIEW
BY JOANNE TENENBAUM

'Private Lives' offers a witty, urbane plot

THOSE WHO think of Noel Coward's brand of theater as wordy and actionless probably will reverse their opinion when they see California Repertory Theater's production of Private Lives, a 1930-vintage London smash hit comedy.

This fast-paced, repartee-laden look at stormy relationships is Coward at his best, and director Peter Craze and a solid cast make the most of the play's possibilities.

Private Lives begins with the most ridiculous of coincidences. A divorced couple, each on honeymoon with mate number two, encounter each other on adjacent balconies at a French resort hotel. Each has married, this time, for balance.

Elyot Chase (Barry Boys), acerbic playboy, has matched up with Sibyl (Karen Lamb), a prissy, proper young woman who exemplifies for him comfort and complacency. Amanda Prynne (Elyot's first wife) has chosen Victor (Douglas Nigh), an aging, proper gentleman with all the conventional British virtues. Amanda prides herself on passionate attitudes and has a flair for the dramatic matched only by Elyot's.

When Amanda and Elyot encounter each other, the magic of the romantic setting around them and their reminiscences combine to ignite the spark of their past attraction. They flee their respective honeymoons, and for the rest of the play we watch their emotions collide as they deal with each other, their abandoned spouses, and the jumble of emotions passion brings out in all four of them — not to mention some unspeakable behavior.

When proper Victor exults, early on, in his even temper ("I'm glad! I'm normal!"), we hear the cosmic wheel creak. Amanda, better acquainted with the extreme ranges of the romantic emotional scale, counters with an insightful remark.

"I think very few people are normal," she says thoughtfully, "deep down in their private lives."

Private Lives is a most skillfully constructed play. Victor and Sibyl counterpoint each other unwittingly in alternate scenes early in the play, and Elyot and Amanda alternately embrace and snipe at each other like two peas in a pod.

Few couples will fail to recognize the emotional games infatuated lovers play. Fifty-five years after its writing, Private Lives still presses universal buttons, and does it so skillfully that you might as well laugh.

As Amanda, the imperiously naughty spitfire, Kimberly King is practically irresistible. Her sensuous face seems made for pouting and she holds her own in one donneybrook after another without a single lapse from the obligatory Coward panache.

Barry Boys is casually elegant as Elyot. His faultless delivery captures Coward's elegant bitchery even in the most understated lines. Douglas Nigh is the soul of conventional British prissiness as Victor, revealing a capacity for comic character I had not suspected from his incisive characterization of George in Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf, also onstage currently at CalRep. And Karen Lamb creates a great caricature as the proper young British woman still under the tutelage of a dominating mother.

•

IT IS DIFFICULT to convey the elegance of language that makes this play such a rare delight.

Two samples might help. Having been insulted by Victor, Elyot retorts: "You are nothing but a rampaging gas bag:" And speaking of her first marriage to Elyot, Amanda describes the situation thus: "We were like two acids bubbling about in a nasty little matrimonial bottle."

Sets are in keeping with the world-weary art deco setting of the piece, with Amanda's French flat the most skillfully appointed, making an unobtrusive statement about wealth with harmonious pastels picked up in the actors costumes.

Scene blocking is especially skillful. Crockery throwing and gestures in tandem are managed with precision, and nothing detracts from the elegance or pace of this witty, very funny play.

See Private Lives and you will understand why Noel Coward's theater remains fresh in a world changed beyond recognition since he wrote. You'll also gain some insight on an old French saying: "The more things change, the more they remain the same."

UNDERTOW, 1984, is taken from the portfolio of Linda Robbennolt. Robbennolt is the 1985 recipient of The Friends of Photography Ferguson Grant, awarded annually to an emerging photographer who has demonstrated excellence in and commitment to the field of creative photography. The original image is in color.

'Friends' bestow photography award

The Friends of Photography 1985 Ferguson Grant has been awarded to Linda Robbennolt of Oklahoma City.

The $2,000 award has been presented annually since 1972 by The Friends of Photography to an emerging photographer who has demonstrated excellence in and commitment to the field of creative photography. It is the purpose of the Ferguson Grant to assist in the professional and artistic growth of the recipient.

In the series of Cibachrome prints for which she won the award, Robbennolt paints backdrops reminiscent of American naive paintings, in which openings have been made for actual human hands, fingers and faces to appear in the manner of carnival portrait props.

While it is not difficult to determine what is painted and what is real in these images, there is a blending of forms that makes the photographs illusionist in nature.

Linda Robbennolt was born in 1951. She received her B.A. degree in communications in 1973 from the University of South Dakota in Vermillion, and her M.F.A. degree in photography in 1982 from the University of Oklahoma in Norman.

She received a National Endowment for the Arts/Mid America Artists Alliance grant for emerging artists in 1983. Her work has been the focus of several one-person exhibitions, including shows at the Houston Center for Photography, the Museum of Art in Norman, Oklahoma, and the Nagase Photo Salon in Tokyo, Japan.

The juror for the 1985 Ferguson Grant was William Jenkins, director of Northlight Gallery and associate professor at Arizona State University in Tempe. He has taught photographic studies at the university since 1978.

From 1969 to 1978 he served as the curator of 20th century photography at the George Eastman House in Rochester, New York. Among the major exhibitons he organized during his tenure there were New Topographics in 1975 and the extensive Robert Heinecken retrospective in 1976.

In response to his jurying of the Ferguson competition, Jenkins wrote: "Robbennolt's work plays on the old arcade photo trick of painted figures with holes for customers to poke their faces through to become photographed as part of a stereotyped cartoon. In her hands, however, this turn-of-the-century vacation cliche becomes a vehicle for addressing sexuality, humor, fantasy and fear. I have literally never seen anything like her images."

A total of 105 portfolios were submitted this year, each containing 10 of the applicant's photographs. The award to Linda Robbennolt marks the 14th year that the grant has been presented. Past Ferguson grants have been awarded to Catherine Wagner (1984), Tamarra Kaida (1983), Lawrence McFarland (1982), Susan Felter (1981), Mark Klett (1980), David Maclay (1979), Jo Ann Callis (1978), Meridel Rubenstein (1977), Richard Misrach (1976), Sally Mann (1975), Ken Graves (1974), Joseph Jachna (1973), and Anthony Hernandez (1972).

Cole Weston, son of famed photographer Edward Weston, will give a workshop on color Saturday through Monday, May 25-27, as part of Monterey Peninsula College's continuing Photographic Workshops Series.

Later, students will shoot with Weston on location at Point Lobos, and on the final day, do their own Cibachrome prints in the MPC darkroom under Weston's supervision. A critique session will follow. Cost of the workshop is $185.

There are five other MPC Photographic Workshops scheduled for the spring/-summer season. They include one-day photography expeditions to Point Lobos, June 15, and San Juan Bautista, June 22, led by MPC photography instructors Ron James and Jerry Lebeck; a week-long workshop on "The Zone System and Beyond," July 1-6, led by photography authors Robert Routh and Phil Davis; another color workshop on July 13-14 led by photojournalist Ken McKelvie and a workshop entitled "Printing Formulas of the Masters," led by Dick Garrod, student of Ansel Adams and Brett Weston.

Peninsula art trio will 'open' enlarged gallery

AN 11TH anniversary and grand opening will be celebrated Saturday, May 25 at the enlarged location of New Masters Gallery, Sixth Avenue near San Carlos Street in Carmel.

Three Carmel artists will be featured at the champagne reception from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. — Wendell Brown, Will Bullas and Keith Lindberg.

The enlarged gallery in Cottage Row represents the third successive expansion for New Masters.

Wendell Brown is noted for the many moods of his Pacific seascapes. His canvases depict wind-ripped clouds and waves back-lit by burning sunsets. Viewers familiar with the Monterey Peninsula shoreline will recognize many of the vistas Brown has interpreted, from Big Sur to Carmel Highlands.

Watercolorist Will Bullas charges his paintings with humor. Although his formal art education was classical — primarily drawing and oil painting — he now creates almost exclusively in watercolor.

Compare titles and subjects in a Bullas painting. The artist frequently hides an obvious joke or subtle hint of whimsy in the name of the work. In a mad dash from imagination to paper, Bullas frequently places farm or wild animals in unlikely and thus amusing settings.

Keith Lindberg works in a strongly individualistic impressionist style. The elements of his paintings are complementary — muted colors oppose intense hues, delicate forms oppose strong ones, dominant designs contrast with more contrapuntal patterns. Lindberg often takes unusual colors, shapes and designs and blends them into canvases that are at once bright and romantic.

New Masters Gallery is on the north side of Sixth Avenue, just west of San Carlos Street. For additional information about this exhibit, call 625-1511.

Simic Galleries feature Dave Dalton seascapes

HIS SUBJECT "like a liquid siren," the work of 32-year-old seascape artist Dave Dalton is featured at Simic Galleries.

An artist's reception commemorates Dalton's one-man show. Champagne will be poured from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday, May 25, at the galleries, San Carlos and Sixth in Carmel.

STORM SURF, Point Lobos, is an oil on linen seascape by Dave Dalton. The artist will be present at a reception from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday, May 25 at Simic Galleries in Carmel. For details, call 624-7522.

The son of an artist, Dalton gained years of experience with the sea through nautical sports. After he received his fine arts degree in 1977, Dalton visited Carmel during a weekend excursion and explored some 40 galleries. He was particularly inspired by the work of senior seascape artist Alexander Dzigurski.

Dalton moved to Southern California after college to teach by day and paint seascapes by night. He claims to have been strongly influenced by the work of the late seascapist Frederick Waugh. Working in 10 and 14-hour shifts on his paintings, Dalton refined his own style.

"People say to me that I enter a world of my own at the ocean's edge," Dalton said. "I only know that when I am before the ocean I experience a limitless number of emotions — so deep there are no words to explain. The dedication I put into my artwork is a direct reflection of the dedication I feel for the sea — it is my life."

For more information about Dave Dalton's paintings, call Simic Galleries, 624-7522.

Insurance group sponsors contest

'PEOPLE OF the Central Coast" is the theme of the second annual photographic competition sponsored by the California Insurance Group.

Based in Monterey, the CIG last year inaugurated the competition to encourage fine photographic art and the individuals who create it. As before, winning entries will be showcased in the corporation's annual report, exhibited at the Monterey Conference Center through the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, and displayed at the CIG's branch offices throughout California.

Judges for the competition will be Brett Weston of Carmel Valley and Waikoloa, Hawaii; Martha Pearson of Monterey and Don Gruber of Pacific Grove.

Amateur and professional photographers living in the counties of Santa Cruz, San Benito, Monterey and San Luis Obispo are eligible to enter. There will be no entry fee.

Prizes are a $300 best of show award, a $150 second place, up to eight $50 honorable mentions, and a $200 President's Award for purchase of an image to be displayed permanently at the CIG headquarters.

Full details and entry forms will be available soon at camera stores, college and university photography departments, photo galleries and other outlets. Further information can also be obtained from Robert Neubert, CIG consultant for advertising and public relations, by writing the CIG at 2300 Garden Road, Monterey, Calif. 93940, or call 372-7112.

With regard to the competition's theme, CIG Chairman Charlie Bancroft said: "We're surrounded by wonderful scenery throughout the Central Coast. But with all of this scenery, often we pay scant attention to the people around us. Yet the people are equally diverse, and comprise another kind of landscape just as interesting — if only we take the time to look.

"Many walks of life and lifestyles are represented among the people who call the Central Coast home. All are candidates for this competition. We want to get a good look at the people of the Central Coast.

"All that we want, ultimately, is for photographers' creativity and sense of vision to be their guides. And to help support excellent photographic art in the Central Coast region."

Builders of 'Humans' visit Carmel

'THE MOST improbable mythical beings ever immortalized in an overpriced coffee table tome," a series of "humans" captured by author/illustrators Mike Dowdall and Pat Welch, will be honored at Landell Galleries in Carmel.

Dowdall and Welch will autograph their book, Humans, from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday through Monday, May 25-27. A show of original art from the book, plus new art depicting "Carmel humans," will be displayed in the galleries until June 23.

Reportedly completed in 1984 "after years of in-depth research, exhaustive field observation and meticulous scrutiny," Humans is a work of anthropological significance, and includes the discovery and implementation of such inventions as the doughnut and the automatic bank teller.

Its authors chronicle the family of man, from North American to Mediterranean. Ageism is addressed under such classifications as "Not Getting Any Younger Adult" and "Coot."

For additional information about this exhibit, call 625-6555. Landell Galleries is in 9 Del Dono Court (upper level), Carmel.

Teachers authorize school strike

THE MAJOR barrier to settlement is a teacher demand that pay raises be given a prioity in the 1985-86 budget.

But at this point that demand approaches an impossibility.

The proposed 1985-86 budget estimates an approximately $79,000 reserve without any allocation for staff pay raises.

Carmel High School Assistant Principal Joe Feldeisen said the district will have to delay finals and graduation until the strike is over — if one is called.

"Everything would have to be put on 'hold.' We can't give diplomas without the grades," Feldeisen said.

CHS Principal Marsha Kading Kelly agreed, but said she is confident teachers won't strike in June.

"I don't think the teachers would do that. That's detrimental to the kids."

Kading-Kelly made contingency plans in the event of a strike this week.

Parent volunteers were assembled to call substitutes to replace striking teachers, she said.

In addition, several teachers did not attend the early morning meeting and were available to supervise students, Kading-Kelly said.

Middle School Assistant Principal Dee Dresser said she did not make any contingency plans.

"We didn't make any because we were sure they were not going to strike. I did have some of the teachers say to me not to worry because 'we're not going to do that'," Dresser said.

River School Principal Rosemary Montgomery assembled a list of parent volunteers to help in the event of a strike.

However, unlike at the high school, Montgomery chose to wait for an announcement before calling the volunteers to the school.

"I was feeling very hopeful that they were not going to go out on strike," Montgomery said.

Montgomery said students will have to come back to school this summer if a strike cancels classes.

"If we miss a day of school we would have to make it up. That's state law," she said.

Before the May 21 meeting, teachers grumbled about a potential strike but there was never any serious discussion or formal action.

HOWEVER, two separate incidents at the May 13 school board meeting infuriated teachers so that some wanted to strike immediately.

And after the board meeting both incidents sparked a flurry of letters from the administrators and board members that were distributed to teachers.

The problems began late in the meeting after most everyone in the audience had left except a couple of staff members and principals.

The board approved a 5 percent pay raise for the district administrators, which immediately was assailed by teachers as unfair.

Later administrators voted to reject the 5 percent offer and accept a 3 percent salary hike. The raise is for the 1984-85 school year.

"It wasn't worth the dissension it was causing. Peace and harmony are more important than a few dollars," Montgomery later said.

Interim Supt. Rich Hawkins wrote a May 16 letter distributed to all district staff that explained why administrstors rejected the 5 percent offer and opted for 3 percent.

"We are not willing to have our salary adjustment add to the turmoil and frustration which we have all all endured this year," Hawkins wrote.

"We put kids and our educational objectives first. We place the highest value on staff morale.

"No constructive purpose will be served if the trust and mutual respect among employees is allowed to erode and deteriorate. If we ever needed teamwork and mutual support, we need it now."

Trustees are to discuss the action taken by the administrators when they meet at 7 p.m. Thursday, May 23 in the Carmel Middle School library, south side of Carmel Valley Road about one mile east of Highway 1.

Politically troubled Trustee Robert Fenton has further irritated teachers by his disparaging remarks made when voting for the 5 percent pay hike offer to administrators.

According to a transcript of the meeting tape, Fenton said:

"One reason I voted for it is because the administrators — this year particularly — have had to take on added burdens, specifically those not performed by certificated staff, and they should be compensated accordingly.

"Yes, I think that teachers aren't doing their professional duties and it's fallen upon the administrators to handle them," said Fenton, who is a recall target with Trustees James Yates and Susan Bromfield.

IMMEDIATELY, Tularcitos School Principal Jim Kohnke and Montgomery jumped to the defense of their teachers and pointed out that their staff members do perform their duties.

But the board continued the session without acknowledgeing the remarks made by Kohnke and Montgomery, according to those present.

Kohnke and Montgomery then walked out of the meeting.

Later, Montgomery said she did not walk out in anger. Her departure was a reaction to the board continuing a meeting with no further matters that required her attendance, Montgomery said.

The next day letters related to the two incidents began to come in. Copies of the letters were provided to the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook by a teacher.

One letter gives the indication of a board apology for Fenton's remarks.

Dated May 14 and signed by Trustees Doyle Clayton, Pat Condren and Yates, the letter admits that "a statement was made by one board member that has caused considerable hostility among the teaching professionals of the district. The statement reflects the opinion of one board member and must not be interpreted to represent the opinion of the board collectively."

The letter applauds and expresses support for the "high level of professional service performed by all staff members during this very emotional and frustrating year."

In the letter, Clayton, Condren and Yates explained that the basic premise behind the additional raise is to compensate administrators for the extra days they will have to work at the end of the year to make plans for next fall.

"In closing we would like to express our sincere regrets for increased emotional stress caused by the statement made at last evening's meeting. We are confident that we can all work together for a positive closing of this school year," the letter concluded.

The next day, May 15, Fenton wrote a "statement of clarification." His statement says, in part:

"Even though the master contract with the Association of Carmel Teachers uses the words 'professional responsibility' this was an unfortunate choice of words on my part as it could be construed as meaning classroom teaching.

"This was not my intent whatsoever. I was merely referring to those extra duties in the contract pertaining to 'a full share of the normal duties for supervision and non-classroom activities.'

"Additionally, I would like to include the cancellation of the back-to-school night and the limited participation in open house activities by staff.

"The degree of participation has varied, in this regard, among the district schools with the elementary principals indicating the full cooperation of their staffs.

"Additionally, administrators have had extra burdens placed upon them with the departure of the business manager and during the selection of a permanent superintendent." Fenton wrote.

Symphony musicians to decide on mediation competence, leadership ability, administrative skills and audience development capabilities. Each candidate, in addition to conducting a set of rehearsals and concerts, underwent personal interviews and had numerous opportunities to interact with the community. The search committee sought written responses from the entire orchestra after each candidate worked with the orchestra. At the end of the search, board members, orchestra members, and Maestro Haymo Taeuber were given the opportunity to complete a comparative evaluation of all eight candidates."

BAYES: "I fully agree with the content of this paragraph. What Mr. Doolittle fails to mention, however, is that Oleg Kovalenko came out ahead on every survey taken, and that even he stated publicly that 'I don't think anybody on the board would dispute that Mr. Kovalenko was the best qualified candidate technically.' The board chose to overlook him because of imagined fund-raising difficulties. This, of course, is specious reasoning. High-quality musical performances will generate the most funds."

'The issue is simply this: without Kovalenko as music director/conductor with a reasonable contract, our grievances cannot be settled.'

• DOOLITTLE: "All parties involved, including the three musicians on the search committee, thought the process was fair and open. It was not until the search committee recommended someone other than Oleg Kovalenko for the position of music director/conductor that some of the orchestra members criticized the process. This led to the present strike situation. The musicians called a strike before presenting the association with their grievances, ignoring the current contract provisions between the association and the American Federation of Musicians, Local 616."

BAYES: "This is simply untrue. Many musicians were questioning the process all along. When it became known that Mr. Kovalenko had been treated poorly by management and board members and that some of the same people were circulating disparaging rumors about him, tension in the orchestra mounted. At least one member of the search committee confronted others on the committee with the knowledge that they were aware of the behind-the-scenes campaign to discredit Mr. Kovalenko. It was only after the outrageous selection of Suttle that prejudice and bad faith on the part of board and management became open and known to all."

• DOOLITTLE: "The final selection of a music director/conductor is a board responsibility and its decision can not be the basis for a strike. In the United States, there is no metropolitan orchestra where the musicians choose their conductor."

BAYES: "The musicians of the Peninsula Symphony in the San Francisco Bay Area recently selected their conductor and the board ratified their choice. The Cleveland Orchestra recently selected Cristoph Von Dohnanyi as their conductor with six munsicians and five board members on the selection committee."

• DOOLITTLE: "Under California law governing non-profit corporations, the board has the legal responsibility for managing the affairs of the association and may not abdicate this responsibility to others. Any relinquishment of its managerial responsibilities would be detrimental to the orchestra's well-being and would set a precedent endangering the clearly-defined working relationship between the board and the orchestra."

BAYES: "According to the association by-laws, the board is charged to support the highest possible musical quality for Monterey County. They obviously elected to do otherwise in this case, and said do publicly."

• DOOLITTLE: "Once the board made its decision to hire Mr. Clark Suttle, it had a music director and seven former candidates. Some musicians created a hostile environment by directly calling Mr. Suttle and pressuring him not to take the position. Coupled with the strike and the adverse publicity, Mr. Suttle ultimately withdrew, leaving open the possibility of later working with the association and the community as music director/conductor. At that point, the search process as spelled out in the beginning was derailed. There is, at present, no process and there are no candidates."

WILLIAM DOOLITTLE, president of the Board of Directors of the Monterey County Symphony Association, has called for mediation in the month-old strike by orchestra members.

BAYES: "This is the latest in the series of ridiculous postures taken by the board. Of course, there are candidates for the position. One of them is alove and well in Carmel and was declared by both musicians and board as the best qunalified musician for the post. Secondly, Mr. Suttle never signed any contract; Elizabeth Pasquinelli admitted that to the steering committee in grievance committee meetings. He was, therefore, never music director/conductor of the Monterey County Symphony. The hostile environment was created by the outrageous action of the board in selecting Mr. Suttle. He was called so that he would be informed of the true picture of the situation. He had not been told that the board was acting without the consent and support of the orchestra. He was not asked to withdraw, merely to be aware that the board's choice of him over the candidate the orchestra overwhelmingly chose had created extreme hostility in the orchestra, and that this would soon become public knowledge."

• DOOLITTLE: "Faced with a situation where a successful symphony season cannot be conducted without the total cooperation of talented musicians and the substantial financial support of the community over and above ticket receipts (ticket sales generate only 20 percent of the operating income), the board is proposing mediation to seek an agreement."

BAYES: "Mediation is their latest ploy to get us to accept anything other than Mr. Kovalenko. We were not asked, not does our contract call for it. It would be extremely expensive and a waste of time. The issue is simply this: without Mr. Kovalenko as music director/conductor, with a reasonable contract, our grievances cannot be settled. Some of the options they are going to try to force on us include another season of guest conductors, the hiring of Sandor Salgo for a year, or the hiring of Mr. Kovalenko on a conditional contract for one year in return for a no-strike clause. This would allow them to release Kovalenko at their will while we stood meekly by."

CHAPEL OAKS
HATTON FIELDS – CARMEL

An elegant older home on Hatton Road situated on an oak-studded half-acre, backed by greenbelt. The grounds are beautifully planted and sprinklered, criss-crossed by stone paths and a lily pool.

The key room is clearly the chapel-like living room, a 30x15 chamber whose far end shapes a semi-circle and whose ceiling rises in a series of horizontal courses of planks to a height of 26 feet. Great beams cross the upper reaches, and a giant chimney breast swells out from the west wall.

The kitchen is delightful. Just right off the entry hall, its working section (with all appliances in place) is compactly designed with new limed-oak cabinets on one side and a dormer window on the other, to a comfortable breakfast area. And beyond that is a very private deck with hot tub and lots of sun.

Everything's up to date at Chapel Oaks. It's today's home with yesterday's variety of charms. Over 3,000 sq. ft., with 4 bedrooms all of good size, and 3 baths, 2 upstairs and 1 downstairs. A definite showplace, with the dignity of maturity, convenience of complete updating, and the character of gracious family living.
